Money Tyrants Doomed, Asserts Alberta Leader

Premier Aberhart Bitter Over Federal Action Which Keeps Courts From Passing On Validity Of His Acts

Declaring that he had received messages of encouragement from all parts of the British Empire, Premier William Aberhart, in an interview on Saturday, in discussing the constitutional situation arising out of disallowance of three bills passed at the recent special session of the legislature, stated that the fight Aberta was waging was against "the insolent and ruthless tyranny of the money power."

Attacking the money barons, Premier Aberhart declared that "In spite of all their power, financiers fear the open spaces. They dare not come out and face the wrath of the people whom they tyrannize."

The Premier's statements were made when asked to further comment on the situation now existing as between the Dominion and provincial governments.

DOOM SEALED

Doom of financial tyranny has been sealed by the events of the last few days, delared the Premier "and from the struggle which lies ahead of us Confederation will emerge stronger and healthier and purged of disintegrating forces."

The Premier's statement follows:

Previous to this I have hesitated, until I had given it most careful consideration, to make any hasty statement to the press regarding the very serious step taken by the Dominion government in connection with the disallowance of our three Acts. By disallowing our legislation it is clear that Ottawa has raised constitutional issues of the first magnitude.

I am convinced that they have been forced into doing this by the financiers of the east, who intend if it is possible, to confuse the real issue of financial tyranny over the people. In spite of all their power, financiers fear the open spaces. They dare not come out and face the wrath of the people whom they tyrannize.

So they always work out of sight using their power to extend their stranglehold on our lives through every institution they can control—even governments.

My faith in the people of Canada and the empire to which we are bound by such strong ties convinces me that no action by the federal cabinet will obscure the real nature of the fight which Alberta is waging against the insolent and ruthless tyranny of the money power. I have received many messages from all parts of the British Empire, which encourage me to go forward.

MAINTAIN AUTHORITY

We have informed the prime minister of Canada that we still maintain most emphatically that the legislation disallowed by the dominion government is entirely within the legislative jurisdiction of the province.

I told him previously and I have stated over and over again—so have my fellow-ministers—that the legislation did not interfere with the rights of the Dominion under the B.N.A. Act in regard to notes, coin, bullion or any of the specific matters placed under their control, including banks and banking.

I have told him and repeated ad nauseam that the legislation could not interfere with present banking business or with the administration of banks.

I have made it perfectly clear that all we are asserting are our rights in regard to property and civil matters and our rights to control the credit of the province within its own borders over which the dominion cannot claim jurisdiction.

These facts were made perfectly clear to Mr. King, yet in the telegram excusing the action of his government he ignores them entirely, and chooses to misrepresent the nature of the acts disallowed.

HAVE NO DOUBTS

Moreover, Mr. King rebukes us for not joining with his government in referring the acts to the supreme court meantime allowing them to remain inoperative.

In the first place, as he knows, we had no doubts and still have no doubts on the validity of the acts, therefore it was not for us to question them.

Had we acquiesced in the Prime Minister's unreasonable, and, if I may say so, most improper request we would not only have compromised ourselves and very rightly incurred the wrath of our people in Alberta, but we would have been bowing to the dictates of the financiers who were playing for delay for, though the mouthpiece was the federal cabinet, it was the voice of finance that spoke.

Mr. King further rebuked us for the act which protected our vital legislation against attack by obscure agents of finance such as we had already experienced.

We merely sought to safeguard the people against the abuse of our courts to thwart their declared will. We were closing the courts to nobody except those seeking to trick us by dishonest methods.

Is there a fair minded person who could truthfully say this was unreasonable? Moreover, such action was unquestionably within our legislative jurisdiction.

NO APPEAL

But the Federal government in disallowing our legislation has usurped the rights of the courts. I am sure that reference to the courts would have proved the validity of our acts. Nevertheless whatever the decision might have been both the Dominion and the provincial governments would have had the right of appeal.

There is no appeal from disallowance, and the high handed action of the Dominion government closes the courts to the people of Alberta absolutely. I wonder what the verdict of the people of Canada will be on this.

The financiers think that they have won the first round even if it has struck a blow at the very roots of Confederation. I assert with confidence that the last few days has sealed the doom of financial tyranny throughout the world and from the struggle which lies ahead of us Confederation will emerge stronger and healthier and purged of the disintegrating forces of the money monopoly Canada will move forward to take its rightful place in the world.

And we in Alberta, on the eve of the fight upon which we have entered, may well be proud of the part which we are destined to play in this great event in history.

Alberta's Revolt!

Editorial

THE almost unbelievable attitude of Canada's private, monopolistic lending institutions in refusing to voluntarily reduce the unpayable interest rates imposed on the primary producers and the people, generally, in Western Canada, has brought on a REVOLT in Alberta that will undoubtedly have far reaching results.

The mortgage and other lending institutions were warned two years ago, by the Ottawa authorities, to voluntarily reduce interest rates in Western Canada, but refused to do so. Instead their attitude if anything, became more unyielding.

Not a dollar has been loaned in the province of Alberta, under the Dominion Housing Act, which provides for home building loans at 5 per cent interest. Why? Because, to do so, would automatically require the lowering of high interest rates on existing loans, totalling many millions of dollars. In other words, the home owners in Alberta, who have been exploited without mercy, must not demand home loans at 5 per cent interest.

Great Britain, United States, Australia and New Zealand are having a building boom, providing modern homes for tens of millions of families, at interest rates of 3, 3½, 4 and to a maximum of 5 per cent, while, in Canada, we live under the dictation of a little coterie of financiers in complete control of all the credit and financial resources of the nation, who grant or refuse loans on their own terms, in their own interests, without regard to the public welfare.

Farm loans in the United States are on a basis of 3½ per cent, while, in Alberta, the lending institutions are in a panic because the Alberta Board of Review, under the Farmers' Creditors Arrangement Act, is making adjustments of the affairs of BANKRUPT FARMERS and permitting the collection of only 5 per cent interest on the debts to be paid.

The days of interest rates of 7 to 12 per cent are over in Alberta, whether the lending institutions realize that fact or not.

The edict that no loans are to be made in Alberta, until the people accept the dictation of finance, is fast bringing about a serious crisis in the public affairs of this province.

RESCUE FLIERS START SEARCH FOR RUSSIANS

Fliers of Three Nations Scour Icy Arctic Wilderness

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, Aug. 21.—Noted fliers of three nations converged upon the Arctic today for an epochal effort to rescue six Russian transpolar airmen, missing for eight days on the bleak roof of the world.

Canadians, United States and Russian aviators gathered on Point Barrow in an effort to pierce the fog-shrouded mystery of what happened to Pilot Sigismund Levaneffsky and his five companions.

VANISHED IN ARCTIC

The Soviet ace and his crew left Moscow a week ago Thursday en route to Oakland, Calif., with a refueling stop at Fairbanks. They crossed the pole on their 4,000-mile hop the next day and then vanished.

Eager to repay Levaneffsky for rescuing him in Siberia four years ago with an identical heroic act, Jimmy Mattern flew through fog from Fairbanks to Point Barrow, Alaska's northernmost tip, yesterday.

Mattern radioed he was forced to fly by instruments over the bleak northern wastes. Word of his arriv-

According to the Chinese communique the 24 planes, coming from the Island of Formosa, raided Nanking, Nanchang, Yangchow and Pengpu today in small groups.

Japanese aviators destroyed their own planes to prevent them falling into Chinese hands, the Chinese claimed.

TOKYO, Aug. 21.—German support for Japan's policy in China was reported here today following Premier Fumimaro Konoye's warning that pro-Communist elements must be eliminated from north China.

A Berlin dispatch to the newspaper Asahi said the German government press bureau had issued the following instructions to all German newspapers

1—Give lead positions to dispatches from Tokyo.

2—Give secondary positions to reports from Shanghai, and suppress "Chinese propaganda."

3—Emphasize the strategic position of North China with regard to defence against Communism.

The Asahi correspondent said the German government wished to remain strictly neutral as long as the conflict remained purely Sino-Japanese, but would intervene, in conformity with the German-Japanese accord against the

PREMIER TELLS LISTENERS TO HEED EXPERTS

No Use Electing Parliament if Bank Interests Control, He Says

WETASKIWIN, Aug. 21—Two thousand people gave Premier Aberhart a great ovation at the Wetaskiwin skating rink on Friday night. The premier, in opening his address, read three telegrams from Australia.

"Douglas expects every man to do his duty," wired the Social Crediters of New South Wales.

Other telegrams from Manitoba, New Zealand and Vancouver urging defiance to the Dominion disallowance of Alberta legislation were also read to a cheering throng.

"A truly Democratic government is one which tries to give the electors what they ask for," declared the premier, "and I have every confidence that the will of the people of Alberta will prevail.

EXPERTS ASSURE

"Our experts," the premier continued, "assure us of certain success in fulfilling the promises the government made to you two years ago. But don't try and tell them what to do and how to do it. In the past the world has been trying to cure symptoms instead of treating the causes of our economic ills, such as treating unemployment instead of removing the economic cause of unemployment."

Referring to the Bank of Canada report the Premier said that, though there were deposits 20 millions in excess of the peak of 1929, there were 776 millions less funds in use for commercial enterprises.

HONEST CAUSE

Speaking of the recent legislation Mr. Aberhart declared the government never intended to prevent any honest cause being brought into courts but they did intend to prevent actions by obscure persons to hide the real interests who desired to hold up legislative action.

"Let the banks come out in the open," he said. "It is no use electing parliament if the financers stand behind the scenes and move the government like tin soldiers."

In closing, the Premier declared that he was a Britisher from the heart out and that he had no intention of seceding. "We have no need to secede," he declared. "There are constitutional ways of doing what we have to do and we intend to do them."

Quints Begin On Study Of Social Graces

CALLANDER, Ont., Aug. 21.—The Dionne Quintuplets, three years and nearly three months old entered today upon another phase of their education, proper attendance to their social obligations. From now on, the five little girls frequently will be hostesses at dinner parties.

It was all quite informal late yesterday when Mrs. Oliva Dionne dropped in to visit her famous children and stayed for an early dinner. Annette, Cecile, Emilie, Marie and Yvonne were perfect little hostesses and the mother—accompanied occasionally by one or more of her other children—plans to dine in the nursery each evening.

Individual Private Debts Referred To Adjustment Board: 6 Months Hoist

Enabling Order-in-Council Will be Signed Monday—Payments to Corporations Affected—Aim is to Keep Money at Home During Clarification of Economic Situation Here—Processes Prohibited.

Designed to prevent the flight of capital from Alberta by means of bank, mortgage and insurance companies collections on debts, a six months moratorium will be brought into effect in this province as from Monday next, Aug. 23, Premier William Aberhart announced on Saturday. It will be extended for another six months if necessary, pending clarification of the economic situation prevailing here.

The enabling Order-in-Council will be signed on Monday, he stated. The order already has been prepared but in view of the fact that several of the cabinet ministers are out of the city a cabinet meeting will not be held until that time. While the premier was not prepared to discuss the terms of the order, until it is actually ratified in cabinet council, it was learned that the moratorium will be specially directed at the debts owing to corporations. In cases where money is owing to these corporations, there will be no payments made in respect to debts while the moratorium is in effect.

Halt Money Being Sent East

The main purpose of the government in bringing down this moratorium is to prevent money leaving this province. Banks are not loaning money either to the government or individuals and at the same time, while trying, as one spokesman declared to "freeze out" the province, they are still collecting huge amounts from the people of this province, sending the money east and it is then lost to the province.

As there is no co-operation in loaning money from institutions, the government is aiming to keep money in the province.

Terms of the order will be such that there will be no interference with the circulation of money in this province. In regard to private debts or debts between individuals the order will provide that they may be referred to the Debt Adjustment Board for mutual adjustment and settlement but no legal action can be taken without a permit from the chairman of the Debt Adjustment Board, Parliament Buildings, Edmonton.

The moratorium is the second proclaimed in this province and is the result of the situation created by disallowance by the Dominion government of bank licensing and complementary legislation at the recent special session.

Pending a definite clarification of the situation arising from that disallowance a moratorium has been decided on.

The first moratorium in Alberta's history was brought into effect on Feb. 23 last and it expired on July 1.

Government Empowered To Act

The government is proclaiming the Order under a statute enacted at the regular 1937 session of the legislature, an Act entitled the "Postponement of Debt Act."

This measure empowers the government to postpone, until a date to be fixed, the payment of debts of any specified classes, kinds or descriptions of debt, and to prohibit the issuance of processes in relation thereto, until after a day fixed either generally or in specified judicial districts and to stay "until after a day thereby fixed, civil proceedings pending in provincial courts, either generally or in specified judicial districts."

The time during which the payment of a debt is postponed is excluded from the computation of time for the purpose of the Limitations of Actions Act.

Here's Text Of Premier's Notice

In making his announcement regarding the moratorium, Premier Aberhart said:

"After much consideration, the Executive Council of Alberta has decided to declare a moratorium, and an Order-in-Council to that effect is being prepared. This debt moratorium has been forced on us by Ottawa's drastic action on behalf of the Bank of Canada, and the chartered banks. We are determined that while this issue between financial tyranny and our people is being fought out, the suffering and anxiety of the debt situation shall be eased for all Albertans so far as this government can arrange, and this will be continued until the question is settled.

"Alberta has been manoeuvred into a position where she owes five times as much as the total of money at her disposal. Albertans must therefore conserve their money.

"There is, however, convincing evidence that Alberta is being drained as dry of every dollar as possible, whilst bank loans are reduced to an ever lessening minimum. This, despite the fact that Alberta exports more than she imports!

"It would look as though Albertans were the victims of a conspiracy. They must be shielded, and this moratorium is the way to do it.

"It is certain that the banks and their dependent financial houses will try to induce people to believe that they are thus unduly penalized. No qualms need be entertained on that score by anybody, however, as, between them, they can manufacture all the money they need at practically no cost at all.

"It would be a crime to allow individuals to endure any avoidable suffering or anxiety upon that score. May I repeat that we are anxious to give our people in Alberta the right to conserve their money as far as possible, and retain it within our borders.

"For this reason we are issuing the Order-in-Council referred to above."

ATHABASKA SOCRED HEARD AT ECONOMIC MEET

ROWE URGES WORLD CONFAB ON PROBLEMS

Canada Not Independent Nation, Declares Hamilton Professor

LAKE COUCHICHING, Ont., Aug. 21.—A world conference of economists to settle world food and supply problems was advocated yesterday by P. J. Rowe, Social Credit member of parliament for Athabaska, before the closing session of the Canadian Institute on Economics Conference.

The Alberta member of parliament urged the economists conference to discover what each country is capable of producing, and what each country needs for the support of its people.

RACES INTERWOVEN

"The outstanding fact that we're so interwoven with other peoples should make our statesmen get at the real causes of war instead of discussing whether to or whether not to be involved in the war they say is coming," he said.

Professor Kenneth Taylor of McMaster University, Hamilton, gave the following interpretation of what isolation meant to Canada:

"If Canada were an entirely independent nation, she would still be economically interested in the world," he said. "In her own national interest Canada would have to support both Great Britain and the United States should they become involved in war."

If the League of Nations would set up an economic pattern for the world to follow countries like Italy and Germany would "want to join the league from its mere attractiveness," Lord Eustace Percy, British parliamentarian, declared.

Replying to the suggestion that there was no likelihood of developing loyalty to the league as a higher unit than the nation, Lord Percy said:

'The league may be less than a nation in a certain respect, but that doesn't say it is an empty form. I think the league is doing very good work.

POLITICAL UNION

"Partly the reason for stagnation of international peace efforts today is that the various dictators are held by internal economic considerations. They can't accept peace proposals for the moment. In the past the league has been in the main a political union.

"Should it now set up an economic pattern, I think countries like Germany and Italy would want to join the league from its mere attractiveness."

C. P. R. STOCK BIG WINNER AT WESTERN FAIRS

Ward Jones, superintendent of agriculture and animal husbandry for the railway.

Holstein cattle from the Strathmore farm top the unusual list with 36 firsts, 24 seconds, 16 thirds, four fourths and three grand championships, five reserve grand championships, four senior championships, nine reserve senior championships, three junior and five reserve junior championships.

The championship purple ribbon went to the C.P.R.'s champion ram at Calgary; to Brantham Procession as champion ram at Edmonton, Saskatoon and Regina, and to the C.P.R. champion ewe at Edmonton and Saskatoon. In the Hampshire class, the C.P.R. champion ram took the award at Calgary.

Four Rescued In Channel Adrift For Twelve Days

FISHGUARD, Pembrokeshire, Aug. 21.—Starved and exhausted, four London men were rescued late last night far out in St. George's channel after having been adrift for 12 days in an open yacht.

Although verging on collapse, one member of the crew succeeded in attracting the attention of two young boys in a rowboat by beating an alarm on a saucepan.

The yachtsmen were Sydney Hillier, owner and skipper of the 11-ton yacht hazard; Sydney Harris, member of the British Broadcasting Corporation staff, B. Evan and John Sutton.

Hot Water Boiler Caused Blast In City Home Friday

The mysterious blast which startled spectators and firemen during the fire which razed a storey and a half house at 10554 96 street shortly after noon Friday, was explained Saturday morning after the premises had been inspected by Fire Marshall Jack Booth.

Examination of the ruins showed that hot water boiler had burst. It is believed that the fire had caused steam to form in the hot water heater, bursting it.

GERMANY NOW IN OPEN TO HELP JAPAN

Communist International, to prevent any Soviet advance toward China.

The government of the Reich will not hesitate to sacrifice German economic interests in China in order to apply the anti-Communist accord, which is held in Berlin to have fundamental importance, the correspondent added.

The newspaper Nichi Nichi declared a movement for Sino-Japanese co-operation against the Communist International was developing rapidly in North China. It claimed for this movement the help of numerous Chinese writers and associations, including the Peiping Society for Asiatic Culture and the Hopeh Anti-Communist Committee, with headquarters at Tientsin.

Well-informed sources said the following points were made in the Japanese reply to Anglo-French proposals for the demilitarization of Shanghai:

1. The proposition was made too late in a fast-developing situation.
2. The Chinese central government might not be able to carry out its promises, because of a lack of discipline in the Chinese forces.
3. Japan considered it impossible to leave to strangers the protection of Japanese residents.

SHANGHAI, Aug. 21.—War and fire continued to lay waste to Shanghai today, with foreign police estimates that about 11 square miles of the world's sixth largest port had been destroyed. Fire levelled most of Chinese Chapei, Japanese Hongkew, Yangtzepoo, industrial Pootung across the Whangpoo river, and Kiangwan.

Only the international settlement, the French concession and parts of Nantao in the Soochow Creek area remain intact.

In the absence of firemen, who already had evacuated the burning areas, the flames spread unchecked in all directions.

SPEAKER URGES FLOOD OTTAWA WITH PROTESTS

Social Credit Members Explain Financial Needs Of Province

Stressing the tremendous potentialities of state money and the use to which it can be put, Hon. Solon E. Low, provincial treasurer, in addressing a largely attended Social Credit rally at the I.O.O.F. Hall, Norwood, on Friday night, declared that "use of state money is the only solution to the money dilemma."

Glen L. MacLachlan, chairman of the Social Credit Board and member of the legislature for Coronation also spoke. The meeting was attended by 500 Social Credit workers in this city and district. It was sponsored by Zone Three of the organization.

Mr. Low gave a review of the provincial financial situation and the efforts the government is making to set its financial house in order and to bring greater purchasing power to the people.

POINTS TO BRITAIN

The minister, in emphasizing the vast importance of state money, pointed to Great Britain as an outstanding example of a state using this money.

He declared that Britain was using no less than seven billions in state money to finance war preparations.

If, he argued, it was possible to use state money elsewhere, it should be possible to use it here. Furthermore, he contended that it was entirely possible to successfully use it here.

SOLE SOLUTION

He was emphatic in his declaration that use of state money was the sole solution to the present dilemma.

He quoted such outstanding authorities as Paul Douglas, Robert Hemphill, Rt. Hon. Reginald McKenna and other outstanding financial authorities, to support his contention on state money.

He also quoted from G. D. H. Cole's book on "Principles of Economics," and Prof. R. F. Irving's book, which declared that, "I believe the Douglas principles are sound and are the only way out of the economic dilemma."

Glen L. MacLachlan, in dealing with the work of the Social Credit board and surrounding activities, stated that many protests were being forwarded to Ottawa regarding action being taken by the Dominion government. He recalled that the Social Credit League, the Social Credit members of parliament and others had protested.

FLOOD OTTAWA

"All constituencies should do the same—let Ottawa be flooded with protests," he said.

"There is nothing that so strikes terror into the ranks of the enemy as shouts of protest or approval of a united and determined people. It is just like placing across their path a naked live wire of high voltage. If the people of Alberta can unite into a 750,000 volt protest, then the victory is assured."

After outlining the resources of the province, Mr. MacLachlan declared that, "It would be only too natural to expect the people living in the midst of such an abundance would be rich and prosperous people, but we all know that such is not the case. Year after year we become poorer and poorer in spite of all our abundance of natural wealth."

FIRST REQUISITE

He declared that the first requisite necessary to change the natural wealth into the finished products which could be enjoyed, or exchanged for products the people would like to enjoy, was sufficient amount of energy units in the form of machinery, mechanical power or human power.

"That we have an abundance of these becomes quite evident when one sees our vast army of unemployed standing idle and the energy that they could be expending in bringing our natural wealth to the finished state, being allowed to waste," he said.

He said that the next requisite to bring these two, material and energy together is money or credit. Without it not a man could live to work, not a wheel in the industrial machine could turn, not a barrel of oil could be produced and not a ton of coal mined or a bushel of wheat raised. In spite of all the vast natural wealth "we cannot avail ourselves of it unless we have money or credit to induce action to the means by which modern society secures what it wants is money and so our wealth is usually measured by the money or credit we have."

MUST HAVE MONEY

He reminded his hearers that people must have money and stressed the fact that banks had been given the sole right to make money.

He stated that the people had elected a government "to carry out your demands and now comes the time to test out the quality of your determination in this matter and to see whether you are ready to carry this fight through to the end regardless of what the cost may be.

"The government you elected has now thrown down the challenge to the institutions which control the monetary policy that had brought about these intolerable conditions and in your name, has said 'from henceforward these institutions operating in this province must change their policy to one conforming with the demands of the people.' That is your demand and your government has declared your demand and responsive to your will, has issued your challenge and the fight is on."

The meeting unanimously endorsed a resolution protesting the disallowance of the three bills vetoed by the Dominion government.

SEASON DEFIED BY LILAC BUSH: BLOOMS AGAIN

What with beautiful full moons, chill evening breezes and the heavy dews and gentle mists which are so much in vogue in Edmonton these nights a lot of people are telling each other that Fall is here.

But to a lilac bush in the yard surrounding the residence of Sid Parsons at 11712 95A street, all these signs of approaching winter mean nothing. The bush, with the same utter disregard for the settled order of things that characterizes its owner, is sporting a large, luxurious and beautiful set of blooms for the second time this year.

The bush bloomed first early in the year, but after a couple of weeks of splendor the flowers wilted and the petals fell away, leaving a sombre coat of green. But apparently association with the radical Mr. Parsons left its mark on the bush, for just when all self-respecting capitalists' lilacs are preparing to shed their leaves, it ups and sprouts a new spring coat.

"And that's not all," said Mr. Parsons. "You ought to see the rest of my garden. We had vine-ripened tomatoes out of it for supper tonight."

DEADLINE FOR TAXI-METERS IS EXTENDED

Many Operators Reported Weakening In Stand Against New System

With many of the taxi-operators opposed to the installation of meters weakening in their stand, and now signifying their intention to comply with the taxi-meter bylaw the deadline for prosecuting taxi operators for non-compliance has been extended to Monday, according to a statement issued Saturday by Staff Superintendent Matt Blackwood.

"Monday will be the absolute limit of time extension," he stated, "after that date operators who have failed to instal meters, or who have not completed arrangement to do so, will be prosecuted under the terms of the bylaw."

The validity of the bylaw, however, will be tested in the courts, as a number of taxi operators are determined to disregard the city council's legislation. It is expected that a test case will be referred to the courts following the check-up by police on Monday.

Tests of the meters installed will be made as rapidly as possible, Superintendent Blackwood stated, after which the new schedule of meter fares will become operative.

ALBERTA ROAD INQUIRY WILL OPEN MONDAY

Former Provincial Highways Commissioner May Be First Witness

Alberta's Royal commission to enquire into highway construction costs on the Edmonton-Jasper and Edmonton-Wetaskiwin highways will resume sittings at the court house on Monday morning with Commissioner Mr Justice H. W. Lunney presiding.

It is expected that C. A. Davidson, former provincial highways commissioner, will be the first witness, and that the sittings will occupy a ten day to two week period.

ACCOUNTS ENTERED

At the opening session of the commission last Monday, the accounts of the different contractors engaged on the projects under review were placed before the commission and entered as exhibits.

Whether Minister of Public Works W. A. Fallow's private file will be produced during the hearings will be one of the big legal battles of the sittings. C. C. McLaurin, K.C., Calgary, counsel for J. J. Bowlen, Liberal leader, requested that this file be produced at the opening session. He stated there was material in the file relative to the withholding of federal grants on road construction work on the Jasper highway which he considered vital to the enquiry. This application will be renewed during the sittings.

CONFIDENTIAL MATERIAL

Counsel for Hon. Mr. Fallow, L. Y. Cairns, K.C., intimated that the file contained confidential material which it would not be in the best interests of the province to disclose and for that reason Mr. Fallow had refused to produce the file.

Commission Counsel S. W. Field, K.C., will examine witnesses at the opening session Monday and will outline the order in which the 30 odd witnesses it is proposed to call will be heard.

Other counsel engaged on the enquiry are R. D. Tighe, K.C., representing the contracting firm of Roosa, Wickstrand and Willson and Bruce Whittaker, Edmonton, associate counsel with Mr. McLaurin.

CONSTABLE AIDS INJURED PUPPY

Maybe its just because Constable Alex Keating of the city police is soft-hearted, but whatever the reason, a little collie pup which was injured when struck by a car late Friday is alive and well.

A citizen phoned the city police station late Friday and told desk sergeant George Edwards that a little pup had had its back broken by a hit-and-run motorist and was lying crying at the intersection of 111 avenue and 97 street. The sergeant despatched "Long Alex" Keating to destroy the pup.

But Alex found that the pup could limp on three legs and the fourth leg didn't seem broken, so he brought it back to the police station. Saturday morning it was okay.

Highspots of the birthday anniversary:

A pink and white iced cake, topped with seven candles. A new dress; a chocolate trifle—a kind of dessert—for dinner.

The birthday was expected to open a period of greater seclusion for both Princess Margaret and her 11-year-old sister, Princess Elizabeth. Their mother was understood to have decided they have been too much in the public eye lately.

POLICE GUARD FRASER SPAN IN SPUD WAR

Some Farmers Object To Putting Potatoes Through Marketing Agency

VANCOUVER, Aug. 21.—Preliminary law-court skirmishing ended, the theatre of British Columbia's annual potato war shifted today to the green acres of the Fraser valley farmlands.

First move in the field campaign—which last year brought at least three cases of violence and one bloodshed—was taken by the government when it ordered khaki-coated provincial police to deply around this marketing and distributing centre.

THROUGH AGENCY

Provincial police were ordered to guard bridge heads along the Fraser to prevent recalcitrant farmers, opposed the marking act, from bootlegging potatoes into Vancouver wholesalers.

Opponents of the government-supervised marketing plan, which provides potatoes must be sold through a central agency in sacks supplied by the marketing board, lost out in the law court campaign. Lowe Chong, Chinese wholesaler, succeeded in having a court injunction restrain the marketing board from interfering with his vegetable business; but the appeal court set aside the injunction.

While counsel for the marketing board's opponents prepared to test its validity before the Privy Council, minority white and oriental farmers contented themselves with letters to newspapers and resolutions to vent their disapproval of the plan.

There was no authoritative forecast by minority groups of any active opposition to the plan such as last year brought supporters of the plan to bridgeheads armed with pitchforks to prevent contraband spuds from being trucked to Vancouver or from being carried across the river in rowboats.

Word of the death in Port Hope, Ont., of Robert Hume, formerly well-known in Edmonton where for 10 years he was engaged in grain buying, was received here by W. F. Pitfield, a relative by marriage. Mr. Hume came to Edmonton from eastern Canada many years ago, and left 15 years ago to return to Montreal where he was engaged in the grain export business. He retired a few years ago to his old home at Port Hope, and was ill there for a long time before his death recently. He leaves his wife and four children, Mary and John, who were born in Edmonton, and Barbara and David.

NUDISTS HOLD CONVENTION ON RIVER'S BANK

SUNSHINE PARK, N.J., Aug. 21.—Scores of nudists from various sections of the east, south and middle-west gathered on the banks of the Great Egg harbor river today in preparation for the opening of their annual three-day convention.

Local nudists, hurriedly put finishing touches on a "convention hall" they built from pine logs on the camp grounds.

Tomorrow morning the delegates—those who convince four policemen at the gates that they are genuine nudists and not sightseers—will register for the convention and either roam the 2,000 acres picking wild blackberries or jump barefooted into the river.

Those injured were members of the Consols men's softball team and the Packers girls' softball squad, coming to Calgary for a week-end series.

MUSSOLINI THROWS OLIVE BRANCH TO BRITAIN

INTERNATIONAL AUDIENCE ON BROADCAST

London Reacts Favorably To Speech of Il Duce In Sicily

PALERMO, Sicily, Aug. 21 — Premier Mussolini, addressing a world-wide audience, yesterday pledged Italy to a "concrete policy of peace" and declared, "I believe we can arrive at a lasting rapprochement" between Great Britain and Italy.

More than 200,000 Sicilians crowded to hear the premier while in every principal city in Italy hundreds of thousands marched in formation to line up before loudspeakers in central squares. The speech was broadcast internationally.

NO BOLSHEVISM

His only warlike note—"We will not tolerate Bolshevism or anything like it in the Mediterranean"—was an afterthought, observers stated, inserted when the crowd yelled at him to comment on the Spanish civil war situation.

Italy, he shouted, "is disposed to give its collaboration on all problems touching the political life of Europe." He summarized Italian policy with an "appeal to peace to all countries which are touched by the Mediterranean where three continents have brought their civilization."

"We hope this appeal will be heeded," he added, "but, if it is not, we are perfectly easy in our minds because Fascist Italy possesses such spiritual and material strength that it can face the task of adapting itself to no matter what destiny."

MILITARY TOUR

Mussolini spoke at the end of his military inspection tour of Sicily. He dismissed the League of Nations as a "registry office."

Of Anglo-Italian relations he said that naturally there would be meetings between the two empires.

"I said we shall meet with one another," its premier declared, "I therefore beg those who seek to translate or betray my speech, to make the distinction between a meeting and a collision."

"If Anglo-Italian relations within the past two years are examined, it must be concluded that they were marked by great misunderstanding."

British public opinion remained far behind actual events and tended to regard Italy as a "picturesque" country, Mussolini said, adding "it is this picturesque idea I detest."

"They do not yet know this young, resolute and extremely strong Italy!" he shouted.

Satisfying Note Seen By London

LONDON, Aug. 21.—Premier Mussolini's appeal for international co-operation toward peace at Palermo was seen in unofficial circles here as a probable spur to forthcoming Anglo-Italian conversations.

Mussolini's conciliatory tone was considered a satisfying element prefacing these conversations and particular attention was paid to the appeal for co-operation among Mediterranean powers.

LESSEN IRRITATION

Mussolini's proposals, it was held, came at a time to lessen a feeling of irritation which the recent Mediterranean incidents have provoked in Great Britain. (Spain has charged Italian warcraft are responsible for recent attacks on Mediterranean shipping. Italy denies the charge.)

It is possible Sir Eric Drummond, British ambassador to Rome, will confer with Prime Minister Chamberlain before he returns to his post in Italy.

BRITISH M.P. TO SEE EDMONTON ON TRIP WEST

Special to The Bulletin

WINNIPEG, Aug. 21.—Capt. Victor Cazalet, M.C., M.P., and a member of the Canadian committee, Hudson's Bay Company, left Winnipeg today over C.N.R. lines enroute to the Pacific coast. He was accompanied by W. Ralph Parsons, fur trade commissioner of the Hudson's Bay Company at Winnipeg. After a short stay in Edmonton, Captain Cazalet will proceed to Jasper and then go on to Vancouver.

Educated at Eton and Oxford, Captain Cazalet is one of the rising young members of the British House of Commons. He was on active service in the war and on the British staff in Siberia in 1918 and 1919, then at the supreme war conference at Versailles. Recently he has been in Spain as a non-official eye-witness.

Polish Peasant Strike Spreading

WARSAW, Poland, Aug. 21. — The peasants' strike became more serious in Galicia today with the killing of two more farmers and the burning of farm houses. Police shot the two farmers to death in disorders at Bochnia, near Krakow. Yesterday police fired volleys into a rioting mob at Dymow, killing four striking peasants.

Strikers burned six more houses at Limanova when the owners refused to join the strike. Several thousand factory workers threw down their tools at Kielce in a sympathetic strike.

ZION LEADERS NOW DECIDE ON COMPROMISE

New York Banker Heads Bolting Members Of Jewish Congress

ZURICH, Switzerland, Aug. 21.—Zionist leaders decided today to seek a compromise with United States non-Zionists who have bolted sessions of the political commission of the Jewish agency for Palestine on the question of Holy Land partition.

Headed by the New York banker, Felix M. Warburg, the Americans left the meeting last night after the commission resolved to ratify a Zionist congress vote to permit negotiations with the British government on its plan for partition of Palestine into Jewish, Arab and British-mandated states.

When the political commission resumed today, Dr. Chaim Weizmann, president of the World Zionist Congress, suggested a recess. The new attempt to compromise will be made then.

"It is easy to split but at such a critical hour it is desirable to do everything for the sake of agreement," Dr. Weizmann said.

The American group favored negotiations with Arab leaders—not Great Britain—for establishment of a single Arabian-Jewish state.

FRENCH PLANES INSTRUCTED TO PROTECT SHIPS

PARIS, Aug. 21.—The French naval ministry today ordered planes as well as warships to protect shipping in the Mediterranean against unidentified raiders harassing vital sea lanes between France and her colonies.

A regular seaplane patrol will be established over the sea, particularly between Marseille and Tunis, and along the Tunisian coast.

An individual warship escort for vessels leaving Tunisian ports, which was established after attacks on the Spanish government tanker Campeador, August 13 and the Panamanian tanker George W. McKnight, August 15, will be discontinued.

Old Routes Used By Stage Coaches Now Disappearing

Remnants Of Roads Over Which Horses Pulled Coaches Still To Be Found in Some Parts.

CALGARY, Aug. 21.—Like the stage coach that was hauled over them in the early days by horses, the old stage coach roads are disappearing from Alberta.

In the early 80's, all fast travelling in the west was done by stage coach. There was very little trouble on most of the roads although stories of robberies on a big scale have grown up. Robberies did take place but not so many as often recounted, according to some of the old timers here.

One of the major routes was the Calgary - Maclead - Lethbridge run that usually required two days. The coach started from Calgary, hit southeasterly and ran through Midnapore, High River, Mosquito Creek, Granum, Macleod and Lethbridge.

When the roads were in good condition, four horses were used. On bad stretches, however, six horses were usually harnessed. The driver was in full charge and horses were changed frequently, on the long, rough road.

Value of the old coach road disappeared when the railway lines cut across the prairies and began to jut branch lines north and south. Now the well-built highways are taking further value of the old roads away.

Pushed into disuse by modern transportation methods, the old coach roads gradually were fenced over by settlers and ploughed under to grow wheat and other grains. Now, after 40 years, the original stage coach road linking Calgary, Macleod and Lethbridge has all but disappeared. In a very few years more there may be no evidence left of the historic route.

Divorce? Maybe, But Not At Cost Of One Million Says Tommy Manville

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—Everybody concerned with the affairs of Tommy Manville, well-heeled asbestos heir and collector of blonde wives, agreed today he and the fourth Mrs. Manville eventually will be divorced.

Where, when, why and how, they professed not to know. At least, it won't be soon nor in Reno, Mrs. Manville, the former Marcelle Edwards, said today.

It's getting so a woman can't take a trip west without being suspected of intentions to change her marital status, she suggested.

BOUND FOR RENO

And that, both she and her lawyer, Carl Helm, explained, is why she cancelled passage on a plane to Reno last night.

She had intended making the trip with Miss Jean Bartlett, her companion on a jaunt to the Coronation, visiting Miss Bartlett's parents former Judge and Mrs. George A. Bartlett, and going on to the coast to see her mother.

But when she woke up and read the papers this morning—"Tommy offers million for a divorce—C.O.D."—she said she changed her mind.

"People might put the wrong interpretation on it," her lawyer paraphrased her as saying, "so I'm staying right here in New York." And here she was today, going to the movies to keep cool.

NOT THAT HOT

Even before the stories of the C.O.D. divorce got out, Manville was calling the papers from his guarded estate at New Rochelle, N.Y., to deny them.

"My pocketbook's hot but not that hot," he informed city editors and by today the amount of the reported settlement was down to $250,000.

Even then, Tommy said he would not sign.

"Ultimately, I think these people will be divorced," said Helm.

"I imagine so," echoed Mrs. Manville.

"I agreed to a divorce three days after I married her," chuckled Tommy.

ESKIMOS SEE SACRED RITES AT CHESTERFIELD

CHESTERFIELD INLET, N.W.T., Aug. 21. — Eskimos, many of them carrying brown babies in sacks on their backs, gathered at the Catholic mission here yesterday to take part in the 25th anniversary celebration of the founding of the mission, 1,000 miles north of Winnipeg.

They attended Mass as 20 missionary priests of the North West Territories took the oath of faith, before dignitaries of the Roman Catholic church from various sections of Canada.

Archbishops, bishops and priests arrived at this picturesque northern mission this week by boat and plane to take part in the consecration of Father Armand Clabaut as new bishop co-adjutor of the Arctic.

TORONTO, Aug. 21—Vancouver will be the scene of the next annual meeting of the Canadian Bar Association and a Vancouver lawyer, Senator J. W. deB. Farris is the new president, it was decided at the final sessions of the association's 22nd annual meeting here yesterday.

Speakers praised highly Mr. Justice Davis' work in promoting the organization's interest, particularly his tour across Canada meeting members of the profession in every city.

GRAHAM SPEAKER

Magistrate R. B. Graham of Winnipeg spoke at the luncheon and told some humorous incidents in police court hearings and of the changes in modern life and their relation to the legal profession.

Social conditions and customs had been greatly changed by modern methods of communication, he said, but the legal profession changed little. Lawyers were still controlled by the dead voice of decided cases.

Trans-Canada Air Route To Be Ready In Spring

TORONTO, Aug. 21—The Trans-Canada Airways system will be completed by next spring, Hon. C. D. Howe, federal minister of transport, said in a luncheon address here yesterday. More than 100 airfields already had been finished or a start made upon them, he said, and the system would play a big part in Canada's future development.

Mr. Howe predicted that planes on the route, which is expected to be put into partial operation this fall, would quickly be changed from 14-passenger to 21-passenger machines.

Dog's Devotion Keeps Help Away

QUEBEC, Aug. 21—Sometimes a dog can be too devoted. Roch Boutet, 26, was struck on the highway near Quebec last night, and his pet stood guard where Boutet fell unconscious. It wasn't until one man had been bitten about the hands and arms and several chased away, that the dog was enticed from his master long enough to have the injured man treated.

Home-Made Auto Plates Bring Fine

MONTREAL, Aug. 21—You can fool some of the people. Vicent Petralli painted last year's license plates to the green used on Quebec cars this year. The painting withstood a casual inspection some time ago, but police caught up with Petralli when he was stopped on a minor traffic infraction. His handiwork cost Petralli $25 and costs Friday.

FOLLOW B.C.'s EXAMPLE

"But for the influx of workers from other parts of Canada there would be no unemployable British Columbians out of work at the present time."

Thus declares Hon. George S. Pearson, Minister of Labor in the Pattullo cabinet.

Contractors in Victoria, B.C., report an actual shortage of skilled workers in the building trades, though for general labor the influx of unemployed men from other provinces continues.

By way of reproach, Mayor G. C. Miller of Vancouver, tells the unemployed who come to him for increased assistance, that they could get jobs if they would look for them instead of running after relief. "Outsiders from other provinces are getting work in Vancouver while our own residents remain on the relief lists," he complains.

Today the civic host in the coast city only half fulfills the poet's injunction to "hail the coming, speed the parting guests." Complaint is made that far fewer people return by the cheap excursions than are carried thereby to the coast city.

In actual figures quoted by Hon. Mr. Pearson the index figure for employment in British Columbia—with the year 1926 as the base year—stood at 117.1 on July 1st. It was more than 12 points higher than it stood a year ago. It is equal to 2195 more jobs for workers, showing that British Columbia is forging ahead under her policy of reduced hours and increased wages.

If only other provinces would follow British Columbia's example in the matter of wage scales and working hours, they, too, would find prosperity returning and relief rolls reducing.

THE NEW DESPOTISM

The Canadian Bar Association, with seven hundred legal lights of the Dominion in attendance, has been discussing this week the tendency of governments to put themselves forward as being above the law.

Five years or more ago, Lord Hewart, Lord Chief Justice of England, observed the same threat to personal liberty. He called it "The New Despotism", and wrote a book about it under that title, protesting against the growing tendency of governments to take power under blanket clauses in Acts, to do anything or everything in their discretion.

Members of deliberative bodies, paid for their services every time they meet, using up valuable time in talking to galleries or indulging in badinage, end up by handing blanket power to the executive to do whatsoever the Executive Council may deem necessary. A fashion has been set without protest by those who should make protest, whereby every important piece of legislation winds up with a clause empowering the Governor-General-in-Council, or the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council, as the case may be, to enact such rules and regulations as may be deemed necessary to make the Acts effective.

It is not government by deliberative assembly; it is government by Order-in-Council, with the Opposition asleep at the switch.

Every law is an invasion of personal liberty and should be jealously scrutinized by those charged with that duty. The people of Canada are indebted to the Canadian Bar Association for drawing attention to this tendency of legislators to lazily slough off their duties, and hand blanket powers to governments to use as they deem fit.

THEY MIGHT BE SORRY

India welcomed home rule in the characteristic way. In five provinces the majority parties refused to set up governments, in several large centres industrial workers went on strike, while in others students held protest parades. The protesters of course protest that they want home rule with a rush, not on the instalment plan. Were it not for the bloodshed that would certainly follow, it would be a good idea to give them what they want for a season.

That, better than anything else, would teach the dissentients that wisdom and self-restraint do not always go with power, and that the capacity for self-government is a quality of slow growth. Canadians have been trying to govern themselves for seventy years and their forefathers for seven hundred years—and they are not sure they have found out how to do it yet.

If they wouldn't start killing and oppressing each other—which they would do—it would be a good joke on the turbulent Indian brethren to give them the complete home rule they think they would like to have, and see what they would do with it, and what it would do to them.

ANOTHER NAZI DELUSION

Adolf Hitler apparently does not esteem it unworthy of his dignity to be a master of propaganda. Just prior to venting his spleen upon the London Times correspondent who presumed to describe what he saw in the Fatherland, the German leader decided that Englishmen should be informed that Nazis finally had solved the unemployment problem.

When Hitler assumed power in 1933 about 6,000,000 Germans were without work. The number of unemployed last month, he said, had slumped to 663,000.

But the achievement is by no means as notable as this statistical splendor would suggest. Economic conditions in the country are known to be critical. Several hundred thousand Germans have been dragooned into belonging to the private armies manned by political parties. At least half a million more men have entered military service, due to the uncompromising rigor of the revised conscription decrees. Conscription camps and forced labor at a pittance on government projects have herded thousands of other citizens off the labor market. The fatuity of Hitler's claim is further exposed by the fact that business improvement, when it has occurred, has resulted mainly from the wasteful and prodigious expenditures being lavished upon manufacture of munitions.

Germans recently were advised on high authority to prefer guns to butter. If he is wise, Hitler will take little credit for supplying them temporarily with butter at the cost of needlessly multiplying the number of the guns. He has not solved unemployment. He has simply chosen the perilous expedient of utilizing the jobless as cogs in a gigantic war machine.

GO AHEAD

"Admiral" Senator William Duff thinks, "We should all be one country here from the Gulf of Mexico to Hudson Bay. The greatest mistake ever made on this continent was the Boston tea party."

This is sheer nonsense, since the governmental troubles of either country are due to its bigness rather than its smallness. Still, if the "Admiral" feels that way he might go down and preach his doctrine of repentence to the political descendents of the people who made the "mistake." If they are minded to regret the tea party and ask to be admitted to the fold again there is no reason why they should not be accommodated. Not, however, as a part of Canada, but as a separate self-governing Dominion.

Meanwhile, if the Senator thinks Canada is not getting along as well as it should, he and his associates have the remedy at hand. Let them start a "ginger group" and put a little driving power behind some constructive ideas. Gazing back critically at the "mistakes" of a hundred and fifty years ago will not help much, because we are not travelling in that direction.

OLD BODIES AND YOUNG MINDS

A word on behalf of old men with youthful minds was spoken the other day by Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University. Dr. Butler did not mention the fact that he himself is 75 and has the eager mind of a young man. But he referred to the full mental vigor of Leo XIII, who penned the Rerum Novarum encyclical at 81; of Gladstone, who was still Prime Minister of England at 85; of Bismarck, iron chanceller at 75; of Chief Justice John Marshall, writing decisions at 80; of Elihu Root, making amazing public utterances at 92; of Chauncey Depew's refreshing humor at 90.

But lest some of the older generation, who have gone to seed, think that mere years count for much, Dr. Butler warned that it is the mind rather than the physical age that counts. Some men are fixed and set as to every conceivable question by the time they are 30.

"One may be young without being youthful but, happily, one may be old without being aged," he said.—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

FOR SETTLEMENT

There is in Great Britain a deep-rooted desire to come to an amicable agreement with the Irish Free State on all outstanding points of discord. It would undoubtedly help that country forward if there were no hampering restrictions on trade across the Irish Sea. It ought not to be impossible to find some basis upon which common action could be taken and all grounds for ill-feeling be finally wiped out. The best minds of both countries have this idea ever before them, and friends of Ireland throughout the world will unite in wishing them success in their laudable quest.—Montreal Star.

HOW FREE IS JAPAN?

By William Henry Chamberlain

This question must arise whenever the outside world hears of a new Cabinet crisis, of Army intervention in politics, of police raids on persons suspected of "dangerous thoughts," of foreign visitors put through searching examinations by the police if they have unwittingly taken photographs, however harmless, in one of Japan's numerous fortified zones, or—if a military invasion in China such as is now raging around Peiping.

So far as the status of its civil liberties is concerned, Japan occupies a unique position among the major powers today. It cannot be classified offhand either with the major dictatorships or with the major democracies. Prussia in the early days of Bismarck would furnish a better analogy, although here, too, there would be important points of difference.

Looking at the question, therefore, from the standpoint of the critical protestant, one may say that such an individual would have more chance of existence and even of a limited degree of self-expression in Japan than in the modern dictatorships. His opportunities would, however, be vastly more circumscribed in the Island Empire than in the democratic countries. Getting down to concrete cases, the situation in Japan as regards democratic rights and civil liberties is as follows:

Representative Government

The Japanese male may cast his ballot freely for any one of a number of parties, ranging from some small extreme nationalist groups through the large established parties, the Minseito and the Seiyukai, to the moderate socialist Social Mass Party. One small political grouping, the Proletarian Party, stands still farther to the Left. Communism is an outlawed and proscribed creed.

Speech in the Diet, like the voting, is at least relatively free; sharp criticism of the Cabinet in power is not unusual. The joker in this situation is that the Diet lacks the power decisively to influence the course of events, because the Cabinet Ministers are responsible to the Throne, not to the Diet.

Freedom of the Press

Japanese newspapers are controlled, but are not regimented. They not infrequently receive "bans" or notifications from the police that they are not to report or comment on specific subjects. But they are not lined up unanimously on the side of the Government; indeed both the Hirota and the Hayashi Cabinets have frequently experienced a decidedly bad press. The Japanese editor is still able to think first of his readers and only secondly of the police.

Incoming and outgoing news is subjected to controls which are more severe than those of democracies, but considerably less strict than those of dictatorships.

Censorship of foreign news cables from Tokyo is sporadic and anonymous. I have personally noticed censorship twice during an experience of over two years, once at the time when the February 26 revolt last year rocked the Government to its foundations, once on the eve of the signature of the German-Japanese pact against communism.

Right of Assembly

The Japanese has no protection against being haled to the nearest police station for prolonged interrogation if he is suspected of cherishing "dangerous thoughts." An elastic Peace Preservation Act affords the public prosecutor much leeway in this connection. The record of the Japanese police as regards "third degree" methods is not good and has been the subject of more than one indignant interpellation in the Diet. It is doubtful, however, whether this record is as bad as that of police in dictatorships where police activities are above and beyond criticism. The number of persons in prison for political offences at the time when official figures were last made public was between five and six hundred.

Recognized political parties were permitted to hold meetings during the recent election. Police were invariably present in considerable numbers and did not hesitate to interrupt and warn speakers who were regarded as going too far in their utterances. Especially since the February revolt the authorities are unwilling to grant permission for outdoor demonstrations. May Day parades have been forbidden during the last two years.

Academic Freedom

The radical professor is apt to lead a harassed life in Japan. However, the universities, like the newspapers, have not been made so completely subservient to a ruling creed as in the European dictatorships. I have talked with a professor in the Tokyo Imperial University who had a definitely Marxist outlook and with another professor who, after being dropped from one faculty because of his supposedly dangerous thoughts, was able to form a connection with a private research institute of left-wing tendencies which carries on a fairly extensive publication activity.

When one surveys the whole field of liberties, without either exaggerating or ignoring specific practices of repression, it would seem that Japan would rate a score of something like fifty, in contra-distinction to the democracies which would be closer to 100 and dictatorships which would be much nearer zero in a test of this kind.—Christian Science Monitor.

Passing Show

By J. S. COWPER

A British military airplane, which cost the British taxpayer $14,000, was shot down into the Bristol Channel a week ago today.

No; it does not mean war. It was shot down by British gunners.

It was not an accident, neither was it a blunder. Far from regretting the destruction of the plane the military authorities were very pleased with the result. It marked the success of experiments under war-time conditions of the new mechanical range-finders.

A plane of the Queen Bee type, fitted with remote control mechanism, was sent into the air. Visibility was poor—a condition desired for the test. An operator at the ground controls did his best to elude having the plane hit. He zig-zagged the aircraft at 100 miles an hour, 3000 feet up in the clouds, while a sixteen-pounder battery followed it with the new range-finder.

Suddenly the guns belched forth. With the second shot the airplane was shattered and came crashing down into the sea. It had been unable to elude the modernized gun.

Far more quickly than any human brain could work, the new electrical range-finder gives almost instant answers to the question of where to aim at to hit an object flying at a certain speed at a certain height under certain atmospheric and wind conditions, at certain muzzle velocities.

It may not mean much to the good burghers of Bristol, but it spells a lot in the final chain of defences of the British capital with its eight millions of people.

Recent war games showed an aerial enemy would lose half his force in an attempt to reach London. The inner defences, consisting of combat planes, anti-aircraft guns and equipment of a semi-secret character, would be needed to cope with whatever force got past the outer defences.

* * *

Instructions given to British warcraft in the Spanish and Mediterranean zones to sink at sight any submarines that may attack British merchantmen without warning, indicates a quickening of spirit on the part of the British government. This is another indication that Britains feels a greater degree of assurance at the aerial defences of London—the admittedly vulnerable spot in the national armour, since ships started to fly.

I'm not a betting man, but I'm open to wager there'll be an awful howl from Mussolini if any "insurgent" subs are sunk.

In the last few days, fuller accounts of the sinking of the Spanish government tanker, Campeador have come to hand. Though at Rome, the Fascist paper, Il Messagero, announced that the Campeador had been sunk by the Spanish insurgent torpedo boat, Velasco, there can be no doubt that she was sunk by the Iitalian destroyer, Savetta. For hours before the fatal torpedo was launched the Savetta was in easy sight, part of the time steaming rings around the Spanish tanker in an effort to force her off her course and into an insurgent port.

With 9000 tons of benzine on board the Compeador made an effort to escape when the Italian warship ran up her battle flag and sought to block his progress, Capt. Felix Gary, master of the Spanish tanker, hoped to reach French Tunisian waters, but when land was in sight the Italian warcraft launched three torpedoes without warning, killing twelve of the crew and setting fire to the ship and her inflammable cargo.

Truth is never allowed to stand in the way of Fascist aims. It is part of Fascist philosophy that the State is over all including Truth. Despite Fascist denials that the tanker, British Corporal, was bombed and machine gunned by insurgent war planes, examination of the bullets has led to an announcement by an investigating committee of the non-intervention patrol, that the attack was made by insurgent planes.

A double lie was told by the Fascists, anxious to sink the British tanker and unload the blame on the Spanish loyalists. They not only denied that the attack was made by insurgent planes, but asserted that the St. Andrew Cross markings on the planes had been placed there by loyalists in an effort to place the blame on the insurgents.

Events have reached a point where nothing can be believed that emanates from a Fascist source unless it is supported by independent witnesses.

The answer to this policy of casuistry and mendacious falsehood is the instruction to the British navy to counter-attack all submarines or planes found attacking British merchantcraft without warning.

* * *

Madrid, which has survived over a year of bombardment and bombings, has been full of lessons for the military experts. It has most probably saved a greater war in Europe. It has revised all former opinions as to the ability of aircraft to force surrender.

During the nine days fighting outside Madrid from July 6 to 15, the loyalist air force brought down 25 Fascist planes. A more astonishing feat was the bringing down of two large German bombing planes during the night fighting. It means that cities can be defended against night bombers, not only by anti-aircraft batteries, but also by combat planes.

The use of incendiary bombs, once feared because of the terrific temperature of thermite and the inability to quench it with water, has proven an over-rated terror. One observer in Madrid refers to the incendiary bombs as "a complete failure."

Aircraft in general, it is now realized, despite the slaughter of non-combatants from the air at the massacre of Guernica, are not nearly so effective as a weapon of war, as they seem. The number of casualties are much lower than was feared. Their chief injury is to the nerves of men under fire and the destruction of morale to under-trained troops.

Louis Fischer, correspondent for "The Nation," who left Valencia during the July 9-15 fighting, when the loyalists captured nine towns, says that the technical equipment employed in the Madrid offensive was superior in quantity and quality to that employed in any similar battle in the Great War. He adds:

"I am more convinced than ever that the Loyalists will win. They can hold out for years. Can Germany and Italy hold up Franco for years?"

Perhaps that explains the Italian attacks on Spanish and neutral shipping.

A CHURCH GOER SPEAKS

Editor Bulletin: Apparently, as in Edmonton, so in Calgary, I saw where a visiting minister in a Calgary pulpit, was hitting our government. Recently I attended a union service in South Edmonton and heard a real political sermon and to top it off the preacher made reference ot the two experts. How a man professing to be a Christian can stand in a pulpit with such hatred in his heart can expect any thinking person to listen to them is beyond me.

A few more sermons like that and you could not blame people for quitting. If this government is as bad as some of them think why don't they pray for them? I have yet to hear any prayers offered for the government in any church I have been. No doubt there are some that do. I know thousands of individuals are praying for their guidance. Cut out religion and let's have a little more Christianity. Trying to supply food, clothing and shelter to all cannot be un-Christian. My advice to the preacher and church is get behind any good movement or eventually we will lose out.

PREDICTS $2 WHEAT

Editor Bulletin: There have been a great many opinions broadcast the past month on crops, prices and quality of wheat grown on this continent, and so wide a difference of views expressed in them that it has been difficult for outsiders to form any definite opinion of the trend of the market.

As to our western crop, after a survey of it some weeks ago, I made an estimate of 125 million and following this trip up with subsequent short inspection trips, I found improvements in some districts but off-set by deterioration in others.

I feel that my first estimate of 125 million will cover all the wheat this west would produce this year. We will have grades of from 1 Northern to feed wheat, the lower grades caused by rust. This 125 million with our carry-over of 35 million and 17 million in Ontario, gives us a total of 177 million in Canada. Allowing 110 million for seed, leaves 67 million for export during the next 12 months, and considerable of this will not be bread wheat, as 20 million of this is durum, and a large percentage of the rusted wheat will be very low grade. Taking it all in all, good milling wheat is going to be in good demand and sell at high premiums over the option for the next year. This applies to the United States also.

The U.S. government report gives a wheat crop of 890 million bushels winter and spring, but from a milling standpoint owing to heavy loss in grades from rust it would not suggest a millable crop of over 800 million. This would probably leave them 100 million for export provided the legislation now in view by the U.S. government to keep on hand continually 150 million as a reserve against future crop failures is passed.

The United States has a large feed crop this year of corn, oats and barley, which has had a certain bearish effect on wheat prices, but one fact must be overlooked—the high prices being paid for livestock, cattle, pigs and sheep, $17.00 per cwt. for beef, and $13.00 per cwt. for pigs and likely to go higher, does not indicate any drastic declines in feed grain prices. A big percentage of these grain crops will be walked off the farm. Don't forget that corn crops of 3 billion, one hundred million, and oat crops of one billion five hundred million have been raised in the U.S. and disappeared for the most part fed. Since then they have found a great many more channels for use of large quantities of corn.

Broomhall estimates world requirements at 535 million bushels. His estimate on last year's requirements was nearly as low, but he had later to raise his figures to nearly 600 million, and we see no reason after checking over deficiency countries requirements to believe that needs this season will be less than in the crop year 1936-1937.

Reliable reports from Argentine indicate a crop of not more than 210 million bushels and this is contingent on heavy rains before Sept. 1st. Home requirements are 90 million leaving 138 million for export including their carry-over.

Australian prospect at present is for a crop of 150 million provided heavy rains urgently needed come soon. It is doubtful with carry-over that they can have 100 million for export.

This gives a grand total of 405 million bushels available for export from the four largest surplus producers. Broomhall harps on Russian shipments, stating 37 million bushels might be shipped from there. To offset this, Balkan countries which shipped 67 million last year have no surpluses this year.

With this situation facing us, there is nevertheless much discourse on the price of wheat being too high, especially our Canadian wheat emanating to a great extent from foreign countries. Their leading mouthpiece is working overtime on these lines. This active propaganda marks real uneasiness and the law of averages cannot be broken by words. Overseas consumers forget that when there was an over supply, our western farmers had to accept as low prices at 19 cents a bushel for No. 1 Northern. Given an average break they should be receiving $2 a bushel for this same grade today.

It is my opinion that we will eventually realize this price for them.

A Day in Canadian History

By FRED WILLIAMS

Winnipeg has not so many memorials of its past as some of us would like, but it has one link between its centuries as a trading post and the bustling present of a great city. That is the remains of the northwest gate of old Fort Garry, the gate through which traders and Indians and rebels passed in the years gone by. It is just 40 years today since the Hudson's Bay Company presented this remnant of a glorious past to the city as a double souvenir of Queen Victoria's diamond jubilee and as perpetual proof to those who came after that on this site was Hudson's Bay House and the staunch fort, which were destroyed to make a profit for speculators in the early boom days of the 'Peg. Many residents wish that more of the old fort had been conserved, but they are proud of the little that remains, a reminder to those who pause to think that the wide Main street of today was once but a trail leading to the fort, where men with iron will ruled with powers not given to many kings.

Although French Canada had adopted the maple leaf as its national emblem at least as early as 1834, if not before, it was not until August 21, 1860, that loyalists at Toronto, at a public meeting, decided that every native born Canadian would wear a maple leaf with pride when the Prince of Wales came in September. It is a curious thing that, though this was the first outward manifestation of English Canada to favor the maple leaf, all the chinaware brought over by the royal party from England bore maple leaf designs.

It was on August 21, 1879, that the first recorded attempt at kidnapping took place at Toronto. The victim was Robert Jaffray, then a merchant but later the owner of The Globe. But he proved too much for his abductors and was very angry indeed when the story got into the columns of an evening newspaper.

Here's To Your HEALTH

By Dr. Frank McCoy

CORNS

The unfortunate part about painful corns is that such thickened growths tend to interfere with the activities of otherwise healthful individuals. Many people are unable to walk any distance in comfort, to dance, indulge in games, or take part in any other vigorous activity only because of disabling corns.

These "corn cripples" are more to be sympathized with, than laughed at. Moreover, the one with a tender corn must exercise considerable care when in a crowd, lest someone accidentally step on his toes. For the average person, such an accident is quickly forgotten, but in the case of the sufferer from corns, this accidental pressure is capable of causing a most excruciating twinge of pain.

A corn is made of thickened, horny tissue and is shaped like a cone with the base extending outward and the point turned inward in such a way as to press upon adjacent nerve endings. The greatest number of corns are found on the toes and are caused by a shoe which does not fit correctly and causes pressure and continued rubbing on some particular spot. The skin tries to protect itself from the pressure by means of thick, horny layers. Corns located between the toes are likely to be soft, but those on the outside of the toes are usually hard.

A hard corn has a tough core which feels like a piece of horn; in fact, it is composed of much the same material as the fingernail. When the top is shaved off, the structure of the hard corn is more easily studied and will be found to be similar to ground glass in opacity. In the centre of the hard corn lies the core, which is the part which causes pain as pressure is applied.

An odd fact about corns is that some people use them to forecast the weather, finding that if their corns ache, rain is coming.

Corns are very common and are usually treated at home by cutting or pairing. Although removal in this way seem to be fairly safe, there is the possibility of the instrument slipping and cutting too deeply. Many foot infections have resulted from this type of home treatment which is attended by considerable danger, whether the patient realizes it or not.

Although shaving off the top of the corn with a sharp razor may make it easy to pick out the core and may be followed by temporary relief, it is practically a certainty that the corn will return if the same footwear is worn.

I suggest that a less dangerous method of taking care of a corn is to soak the foot in hot water to which cheap Epsom salts have been added. Soak for ten minutes both morning and evening, then dry the foot carefully and shake talcum powder over the foot and between the toes. You will find that in many cases the soaking will cause the hardened portions of skin to soften and come off easily after a few days.

The important thing to remember is that you should try to obtain better fitting shoes which will give your feet more room and remove the pressure which produces corns. Usually the patient has been wearing a shoe which is too tight and too pointed at the toe. With the correction of the footwear, further corns do not form.

The hot water treatment will produce good results in the majority of cases, but those who are having considerable trouble with corns would do well to consult a chiropodist who has the training and skill to relieve foot troubles of this nature. I strongly urge that you keep sharp razor blades and knives away from corns.

Recently, I have had many letters from readers wishing to know the usual drug found in corn plasters. The drug principally used is salicylic acid. Very often this produces satisfactory results.

A Notable Gathering

By Nellie McClung

A SPEAKER at the Pan-Pacific Conference in Vancouver gave out the startling statement that women are to blame for wars, and her course of reasoning, though a bit labored, was interesting. She said women had demanded so much of men, so many luxuries and adornments, that war in the economic field naturally follows; and men having had to fight in this way, go on to fight in the way of cannons and submarines. She did not elaborate her theory, but just left the thought with us to mull over at our convenience. She also said that women live longer than men because they take better care of themselves. "Men die at 50, and women go merrily on," she said, "having breakfast in bed and every care and attention."

I wonder if the war in Ethiopia was caused by the Italian women's love of finery. Maybe we have been too hard on the military spirit, the lust of power, and possession, when all the time we should have been attacking our own love for better housing conditions and frigidaires. There may be a point in this argument, but it eludes me.

The military nations are not the nations which pay much heed to what the women want or think. No, the cure for war is not so simple as this negative suggestion that women be less demanding in matters of adornment and comfort.

The same speaker said that women are incapable of sustained mental effort, and are disposed to pass from one subject to another. Their life, with its divorce duties and occupations has produced a patchwork mentality. The same speaker told us later in her address, that she has often been told that she has a masculine mind.

NELLIE McCLUNG

I merely mention these things to show that the proceedings at the Pan Pacific Conference were not deadly unanimous. There were plenty of places for lively discussion.

The outstanding feature of the conference to me, was the Oriental women, so calm and capable and beautiful in their artistic costumes. Perhaps they regard time more sensibly than we do, and know the value of meditation. Whatever the cause, they have a poise and a charm all their own.

The past president, Mrs. Gauntlett, is a Japanese woman, who married a British professor 40 years ago. She is the mother of six children, one of whom is a missionary, and all of of them fill positions of trust in Japan. When she became president of the Pan-Pacific Women's Association she knew the hostility of the Chinese and Koreans, so she visited these countries and asked the women she met to pray with her, saying, "Perhaps as Japanese, Chinese and Koreans we cannot meet in harmony, but we can as Christians, for the fellowship of Christ overcomes all barriers of race and color."

WORK AMPLY JUSTIFIED

The work of foreign missions has been amply justified in these great women of the Far East, who are helping to build a new world on love and understanding. One of them, a Japanese woman, presented each of us with her printed message, from which I quote a paragraph.

"My homeland is a small country and many people are crowded within it. We know in the past many evils have been repeated by man, one evil begets numerous evils. Shall we not as citizens of the nations bordering the Pacific, throw overboard suspicion, jealousy and fear, forgetting the past; and as women work for the establishment of Peace. If God be with us who shall be against us?"

This was the keynote of the convention. This spirit of sweet reasonableness based on Christian ethics.

DISCUSSION REVELATION

"Population Pressures" engaged the attention of the conference on one of the days when I was present, and to hear Japan, New Zealand and Australia discuss this problem, which concerns them so closely, was a revelation to me.

I learned that emigration from Japan, on which government spends millions of yen each year, does not take away as many people in a year as come in from Korea; and that the number of Japanese who live away from Japan equals only the number of one year's increase. So when we speak, as we sometimes do, of growing big-hearted and offering a few hundred acres in some uninhabited valley of Canada to the Japanese people as a gesture of good will to our neighbors across the Pacific, we are offering half a soda biscuit to a starving family. When we think of the increase each year in Japan's population, we stand aghast as the immensity of the problem; four hundred thousand people seek new positions annually in Japan, and this number will increase as the years go on.

Among the Chinese delegates, I met an interesting woman doctor, Dr. Tai Keong Li, a little woman dressed in native dress, who had not been in Canada before. I had read in the papers of her and of the fact that she had brought five thousand babies into the world. She corrected this report and said the figure should have been four thousand and fifty. "Newspapers make it too many," she said. She has nine children of her own and she told me about them. "Life has been good to me," she said, "and given me great work to do for my people; and I may make the newspaper story true yet," she added with a smile.

MRS. SMITH IMPRESSED

Among the American delegates Mrs. Ida B. W. Smith impressed me. She is a leader of the temperance forces in the United States, and told me of a film they had produced called the "Beneficient Reprobate" showing the many uses to which alcohol is given for the benefit of humanity, followed by the other side of the story. Actual photographs of experiments carried on in laboratories show how one drink impairs the sense of balance, or preception of danger. "We have to be practical and scientific now in teaching temperance," Mrs. Smith said. "The young people of today are not moved by sentiment."

The women who came to the conference travelled at their own expense, and some of them had to leave their homes six weeks before to reach Vancouver in time. This was the fourth conference, and they are held every three years. These conferences may seem significant in this world of bursting bombs and broken treaties, but there is more in it than just a parcel of women meeting and talking. Every woman represents thousands of her country-women, awakened and watchful and learning. They read serious books eagerly and intelligently. They are facing life's realities squarely and courageously, and to their ranks come the brightest minds of all countries. People who deplore entry of women into public life (and there are still some of them left) are too late now with their protests. The trouble began when women learned to read!

Lady Astor made the statement in her recent visit to America, that the nations who deny individual liberty must first reduce their women to a state of subservience and silence. A well-informed, intelligent womanhood is a country's safeguard. Good intentions, homely virtues, devotion to one's family are not enough. There must be intelligence, and the forward look. Every little group of women who meet in Mission circles, Women's Institutes, Peace Societies, or other groups to study the problems of the world, are helping to bring in the day of Peace and Goodwill between the nations.

SISTER LUSIGNAN ENDS NORTH TRIP

FORT SMITH, N.W.T., Aug. 17, (By Mail) — Sister Lusignan, mother Provincial of the Grey Nuns of Charity for the North West Territories, has returned from a tour of inspection of northern missions. She was accompanied by Mother Gallant, Superior General of the Order, Montreal, and her private secretary, Sister Ferland. Mother Gallant expressed the wish on her first trip North of Edmonton to experience all the different modes of travel in this part of the world.

From Edmonton she travelled by N.A. Railways to Waterways, by plane from McMurray to Chipewyan and by R.C. Mission gas boat from there to Fort Fitzgerald where she was greeted by Madame Wilfred Champagne and Mr. Micky Ryan and transported over the Smith Portage, in one of famous Ryan taxis, to Fort Smith Mission hospital where she was warmly received by the Sisters.

The balance of her inspection tour through the north was equally interesting and opened a new world to her, and she will tell Montrealers of Herschel and the Arctic ice.

Raspberry Newest Color in Make-up

By ALICIA HART

Cosmetic experts are talking a good deal about raspberry rouge and lipstick. Deep red with blue undertones, this is a shade to consider for fall, especially if you are going to wear crushed plum, rain-washed blue, sumac red or currant wine.

A brunette, in a crushed plum wool dress, might wear powder in a deep ivory tone to match her skin, deep raspberry lipstick and color, will need lighter powder and rouge. A blonde, wearing the same lighter shades of raspberry lipstick and rouge. The light from the crushed plum wool will not be the same shade on her face as on the brunette's, so there is no use in saying this lipstick goes with that color and so on. Everyone must consider her individual skin tones as well as the shade of her frock.

With clear colors, like blue-green, black, true browns and such, clear bright rouge and lipstick are recommended. If you wear the raspberry tones with these you are likely to appear too made up.

Only with certain shades of brown which cast a mellow tannish glow over face and throat are orangish or rusty lipstick and rouge advisable. If you have only one brown outfit in your wardrobe, better get special makeup for this.

Naturally sticking to one color theme in a seasonal wardrobe saves wear and tear on the budget from the standpoint of cosmetics as well as hats, shoes and other accessories. If you insist on having a brown suit, then a black coat and black and dark reddish dresses to wear under it, two sets of makeup are just as necessary as two sets of accessories. Raspberry lipstick isn't much nicer with the brown suit than are the black shoes or gloves.

Hospital Board Meeting Is Brief

The meeting of the Edmonton hospital board Friday at the Royal Alexandra was one of the shortest on record. Not a single contentious item was on the lengthy agenda, which was disposed of in half an hour.

"The affairs of the board are in a satisfactory condition, and the brevity of this meeting is an indication that members of the board have confidence in the work of their subcommittees," said V. A. Porter, veteran board chairman.

Graduation Time for Film Stand-Ins Whose Work Labels Them 'Stand-Outs'

Small Class Of Promising Doubles Given Chance Before Cameras

By PAUL HARRISON

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 21.—Some of the stand-ins are becoming stand-outs—in the throng of movie aspirants.

Time was when you couldn't have named a single stand-in who seemed likely ever to emote before a live camera. They merely stood, or sat, or walked between chalk marks, while lights were adjusted and assistant cameramen got their bearings.

Nobody seems to have wondered whether they might have screenable personalities of their own. They may as well have been wax dummies. Indeed, dummies frequently have served as stand-ins.

Lately, though, some of the off-screen doubles have been getting a chance. After Jean Harlow died, and thousands of fans pleaded for the release of her unfinished last picture, "Saratoga," the studio tested dozens of blondes in a search for someone to finish the film.

PAINLESS DECEPTION

Finally somebody said, "Let's try her stand-in, Mary Dees."

So Mary Dees, who never had dreamed of being a Harlow understudy, found herself playing in "Saratoga." It is a painless deception. Miss Dees had very little to do.

Nevertheless the emergency brought her to the attention of M-G-M officials, and now she has a contract and is playing atmosphere roles in two pictures, "Big City" and "Black Lightning."

"Black Lightning" is providing even greater opportunities for two other stand-ins. Virginia Grey, former stand-in for Madge Evans and Florence Rice, is playing the first lead of her career in "Black Lightning" opposite Bruce Cabot and Edward Norris.

STAND-IN FOR BARBARA

And the second feminine lead is played by Jean Chatburn, who got her first studio job as stand-in for Barbara Stanwyck.

Jean Chatburn, above, is a stand-in who is getting a chance as a real actress. She has the second feminine lead in "Black Lightning."

Also in "Black Lightning" is Bob Davis, Franchot Tone's stand-in who had a small role in "Between Two Women." He still works for Tone, and divides his time between his own set and the stage, where Tone is working in "The Bride Wore Red."

For opportunities to act, the stand-ins usually must thank their stars. Many of them have had the expert coaching of the stars, and frequently they have small roles in their employers' pictures.

Don Milo, a near-likeness of Robert Taylor, has appeared in a number of pictures. William Powell has obtained numerous jobs for his stand-in, "Doc" Dearborn, and Robert Young's man, "Chalkie" Williams, recently became an actor with an assignment in "Between Two Women."

Some Hopefuls Retarded By Resemblance To Stars Themselves

Casha Le Sueur, Joan Crawford's sister-in-law and stand-in, now has had sufficient experience that she aspires to featured roles. Ann Robinson, Memphis girl who came here dreaming of stardom, found opportunities scarce and finally took a job doubling under the lights for Olivia de Havilland.

Eventually, though, directors noticed her, and now she has a stock contract with Warner Brothers.

Marie Osborne was a celebrated child actress once, and logically might have been expected to continue in prominence as she grew up. But she dropped out of pictures and finally returned to the studios as stand-in for Ginger Rogers.

She studied constantly, and Miss Rogers helped. Small parts were given her occasionally. And now she has a contract at RKO.

Virginia Grey's story is somewhat similar. The daughter of Ray Grey, comedy director, she was born and reared in Hollywood. She could dance, too. With such a start, a movie career seemed a certainty, but it wasn't easy. After a brief success as a child acress she left the screen and taught dancing.

Hollywood next saw her, briefly, as a showgirl in "The Great Ziegfeld." Afterward she remained at the studio to stand-in for Miss Rice and Miss Evans.

Luck brought a chance in a musical short, and her dramatic ability was discovered. Next came a role in "Old Hutch," and now the featured lead in "Black Lightning."

Paradoxically, none of these people—except Miss Dees—could have graduated into the acting ranks if they had borne striking resemblance to any of the stars. A stand-in should have about the same height, hair and coloring, but similar features are not essential. The few Hollywood stand-ins who do look like their employers are not likely ever to have a chance before the cameras.

At Rialto

Harold Huth, Cicely Courtneidge and Jack Hulbert, who appear in "Take My Tip," rip-snorting comedy which opens at the Rialto theatre today until Tuesday.

AMUSEMENTS

RIALTO

Cicely Courtneidge in the new comedy "Take My Tip" at the Rialto theatre, in which she co-stars with Jack Hulbert, indulges in a genteel drinking bout—on double brandies. It is not real brandy, of course, but an innocuous brew distilled by the property department.

The setting is the ballroom of the luxury hotel at which Jack Hulbert is head-waiter. Seated at a table overlooking the gay throng of dancers are Cicely Courtneidge and Frank Pettingell. Pettingell, in the role of a professor whose memory works only when he is intoxicated, is fast getting into a remembering mood; Cicely Courtneidge, for very good reasons, is determined his memory shall not return. Every time her companion orders drink she consumes both his and her own. The star rehearsed for this scene so enthusiastically that she had downed at least half-a-dozen "doubles" before the cameras started to turn. The scene was shot and several takes were necessary. By the time Director Herbert Mason was satisfied Cicely Courtneidge was gasping for breath—she had consumed the equivalent of a bottle of (property) brandy. Filmgoers will be gasping for breath when they see this scene—it is one of the funniest in "Take My Tip"—a picture abounding in comical situations.

The spectacular round-up and subsequent stampede of a maddened herd, gun duels between racketeers and ranchers, a free-for-all fight that climaxes in a wild chase across roof-tops, hair-raising stunts and hair-breadth escapes—all these thrills and many more enliven the action of Harold Bell Wright's story of the New West, "Secret Valley", the second feature on the Rialto's double-feature bill.

Richard Arlen is starred in the action drama as a young rancher who gives refuge to a runaway bride, who has been tricked into marriage with a racketeer. Arleen soon clashes in combat with the pursuing husband and his ruthless mobsters.

STRAND

Rich with highly sympathetic human interest and replete with swift, dramatic action, Columbia's "I Promise To Pay," an expose of the loan shark racket, opened today to enthusiastic audiences at the Strand theatre.

Chester Morris, Helen Mack, Leo Carrillo and Thomas Mitchell top what might well be termed an all-star cast. Such excellent actors as Thurston Hall and John Gallaudet give splendid support. Pasy O'Connor, 6-year-old starlet, in her first dramatic role, is extremely good as the child of Eddie Lang (Chester Morris) and his young wife, Mary (Helen Mack).

The story, by Mary C. McCall, Jr., and Lionel Houser, is based on the trouble that Eddie Lang, happy-go-lucky young clerk, gets into when he borrows money from a loan shark in order to take his wife and youngsters away from the hot and crowded city for a vacation.

He had borrowed the money, it develops, because he had optimistically anticipated a bonus from his office. After their vacation, this bonus fails to materialize. Thereupon, Lang finds himself caught in the meshes of a loan shark syndicate operated by Richard Farra (Leo Carrillo) as the man higher-up in the racket.

Eddie is badly beaten when he tries to hold out some of his salary from the strong-arm collectors, and finally, in desperation, he embezzles some of the funds of the office where he works. His conscience bothers him and he replaces the money; though not prosecuted, he loses his job.

After getting another job and again being beaten up for refusal to pay, he takes his troubles to the authorities. The dramatic manner in which the thugs try to keep him from testifying—even to the point of attempted murder—forms the thrilling climax of the story.

EMPRESS

Noteworthy in several respects is the First National melodrama "Marked Woman," starring Bette Davis and featuring Humphrey Bogart and Eduardo Ciannelli in addition to a number of other prominent players, which will have its local premiere at the Empress, Monday.

For one thing, it brings back to the screen, after a rather extended holiday, the slim blonde emotional actress who last year won the coveted gold statuette of Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences for the best performance by any feminine player.

For another, it has a strong and vivid story dealing fearlessly with the plight of a group of night-club hostesses who are the unwilling tools of a big-time racketeer and his ruthless gang.

Miss Davis is shown as one of a group of hostesses who are under the domination of the boss racketeer. The other girls are Isabel Jewell, Jane Bryan, Lola Lane, Rosalind Marquis and Mayo Methot.

Ciannelli, the menacing villain of "Winterset," plays the head man of the rackets, and Humphrey Bogart, who was one of the traitorous "Black Legion" in his last screen appearance, is the fearless prosecutor.

CAPITOL

A gripping romance, comedy, some of the finest character portrayals in years, and thrills of a thundering racetrack are highlights in "Saratoga," the picture that brings Jean Harlow and Clark Gable to the Capitol theatre for one week commencing today.

Never was Jean Harlow lovelier. Never has the virile Gable been given a greater opportunity than as the "square" gambler and bookmaker in the new racetrack story, penned by the authors of "San Francisco," Anita Loos and Robert Hopkins. Jack Conway's deft direction is apparent at every moment.

"Saratoga" tells the story of the spoiled daughter of a wealthy horse-owner, and gambler and bookmaker whom she first hates, fights, then loves. The background of the swift action ranges from penthouses and a London hotel to a Kentucky horse farm, the Saratoga racetrack, and famous races on tracks in various points of the United States. The final racing climax, photographed by special equipment, provides a genuine thrill.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer gave the picture an elaborate cast. Frank Morgan and Una Merkel are seen together as a comedy team for the first time, and more laughs as well as a song are contributed by Cliff Edwards and his ukelele. Other players are Walter Pidgeon, George Zucco, Jonathan Hale, Hattie McDaniels, Frankie Darro and Henry Stone. Thousands appear in the racing and grandstand sequences.

One of the most interesting sequences takes place in Lionel Barrymore's horse-breeding farm where thoroughbred animals ranging from famous race horses to young colts, all brought from stock farms in California, appear. One of the most dramatic scenes is that in which Miss Harlow, after triumphing over Gable and seeing him "go broke" through her activities, realizes that she loves him. Edward Ward provided the picture with an almost symphonic score, and the photography of Ray June, A.S.C., adds definitely to the effective dramatic situations.

DREAMLAND

There's a British garrison trapped in Iraq (Arabia), and only one chance for them to be saved.

They have an old, feeble airplane. It can fly—wtih bombs to a dam that needs to be destroyed. But it can't carry enough fuel to fly back. The man that flies it and destroys the dam and saves the garrison has no chance in the world of ever returning. And there are just two men who know how to pilot a plane.

That's the climactic situation in "Another Dawn," the romantic adventure story filmed by Warner Bros. coming to the Dreamland Monday.

One of the men is that handsome Irish star, Errol Flynn. He's a junior officer and pal of the Colonel of the outfit. Also, he's in love with the Colonel's wife, who is the lovely Kay Francis. And the Colonel is that strikingly good-looking Englishman who used to the matinee idol of London—Ian Hunter. He loves both his wife and his junior—but he has no idea that they love each other.

PRINCESS

Hollywood is tending more and more away from location trips and toward the creation of natural settings in the studio sound stages.

A notable recent example of this practice, which enables producers to formulate a definite schedule and stick to it through their ability to control sound, lighting and weather in out-of-door sequences filmed indoors, was "You Only Live Once," the Walter Wanger production starring Sylvia Sidney and Henry Fonda and coming to the Princess theatre Monday.

Although probably 50 per cent. of the action of this film takes place out of doors, the unit left the United Artists studio for only a few short scenes and spent most of its seven weeks' actual camera work on sound stages.

Forests, mountains, deserts came into being through the miracle of Alexander Toluboff's modern set construction. Rain, wind, fog, sunshine were on tap at a moment's notice. Nature's whims, the old bugaboo of location scenes, could be laughed at.

Earth Shrinking, Jewish Scientist Has Discovered

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Editor

NEW YORK, Aug. 21—Dr. S. Sambursky, age 36, of the Hebrew University, Jerusalem, today gives in the Physical Review here, evidence the whole universe is shrinking, with everything in it, including even the measurable units of energy.

His idea is as startling as Einstein's discovery of the curvature of space-time and somewhat analogous in setting. Einstein was also a young man when he offered the world his then unbelievable theory. Sambursky, German born, has been a quiet, unknown scientific worker in Jerusalem since 1924, except for two years of science work in Holland.

The American Scientific Journal in accepting his article considered both its worthiness and Sambursky's standing among scientists who know him.

His evidence of shrinkage comes from recent discoveries made with the world's largest telescope at Mt. Wilson, California. This telescope shows that apparently the nebulae, which are island universes of stars, way out at the edge of visibility, are all rushing away from the earth.

Poison Bottle Stopper Screws Opposite Way

LONDON, Aug. 21—A London doctor and an engineer, worried about the number of people killed by mistaking poison bottles for ordinary ones, have invented a poison bottle stopper which opens the wrong way.

In the dark, or in moments of forgetfulness, anyone trying to open a poison bottle in the ordinary turn-to-the-left way would merely screw the stopper more firmly into the neck of the bottle.

To make the stoppers even more fool-proof, a special design of stopper, with heavily embossed letters, has been designed.

WESTLOCK CUBS ENJOY CAMPING AT KAPASIWIN

Inveterate Campers Make Third Successive Sojourn Under Canvas at Beach

Westlock Wolf Cubs are certainly going places. Camping out last year at South Cooking lake and the year before at Lac La Nonne, practically the same gang has motored 160 miles to make use of Anglican church camping facilities at Kapasiwin Beach, Wabamun lake this last week.

Arriving by truck Saturday afternoon the boys immediately ran up tents and divided themselves into three packs of six for a series of competitions on the camping program. A treasure hunt back through the woods surrounding the camp was won by the white six composed of Don Sutherland, Ian Gilchrist, John Collins, Bill Adkins, Jack Armstrong and Leonard Bruder.

The same six were also successful in a fire-building competition held Monday night. A string was placed at the same height above the three fires built by the various sixes and then the fires were simultaneously set alight. Flames from the white six fire caught the string a mere fraction of a second before those of the red six but the difference was sufficiently marked to give the win to the white.

NINETEEN MEMBERS

The camp directed by Rev. Burgomaster has 19 cubs registered from three Westlock churches, St. Philips Anglican, St. Marys Catholic and Westlock United Church. Assisting Mr. Burgomaster are a staff of six including acting cubmaster Rudolphe Renaude and scouts Bill Clennett and Jim Shephard.

A hike through the Duffield Indian Reserve, bordering on Lake Wabamun, was the highlight of Tuesday's program. The hike was in the form of a hound and hare chase, the three leaders being the hares and the rest of the camp the hounds. The boys were greatly interested in the construction of Indian teepees and net-drying racks. Some beautiful beadwork was shown them.

An athletic meet with jumps, races and baseball throwing competitions was held on Wednesday. Spirited softball games were played throughout the week and a daily dip was required of each camper.

NO "SISSIES" NEED APPLY

Boxing instruction was provided in the banquet hall before the huge fireplace when the weather was not suitable for outside activity.

A rousing sing-song was enjoyed. Rev. C. C. Cuttell of Wabamun led the assembly in numerous sea shanties and then told stirring sailing stories that had the boys at a high pitch of interest.

Friday was visitors day and many remarked upon the excellent condition of the tents and camp equipment. Following daily inspection a valuable trophy was given for tent neatness, ground care and personal appearance. The camp was to be climaxed Saturday by a second Treasure Hunt, the boys returning to Westlock on the following afternoon.

Excellent camping facilities provided by the Anglican church at Kapasiwin have been put to use every week in July and August and another camp is scheduled for next week. The camp, constructed in 1936, had several new buildings added this year. It is now one of the best equipped in the province.

Mother Killed In Chase Over City Streets, Repentant Puppy Adopts Orphan Pussies

When Trixie, bull terrier owned by Mrs. Victoria Costanzo, of Flushing, Queens, N.Y., chased a cat across the site of New York's World's fair, she became the foster mother of four kittens. PEACE IS THEME OF YOUTH BOARD FOR 3 DAY CAMP

The sixth annual camp sponsored by the Edmonton Interdenominational Young People's Board will be held during the Labor Day week-end, September 4, 5, 6, at Fallis. A great number are expected to take advantage of such opportunities for enjoyment and educational profit as will be offered.

The theme chosen for the camp this year is "Youth Crusade for Peace" and the leaders will be Norma Cuthbertson, Percy Boulton and Rev Bob McLaren, who will speak on "Personal, World and National Peace."

Included in the three-day program will be a church service on the shores of the lake Sunday morning, varied sports under the direction of George Jackson and a discussion period on Leadership Training. Miss Ella Huston and Percy Boulton, delegates to the recent Canadian Youth Congress at Montreal, will give reports of the congress.

The director of the camp will be John McClary, who is well known throughout Alberta for his work in young people's affairs. The camp committee members are Ella Huston, convenor; Billie Jackson, Alva Koerner, Ruth Howard, Ruby Inkpen, Ray Burnap, Bill Thornton, Howard Hall and Jorwerth Vaughn. The closing date for applications is August 28.

PET ROOSTER SLEEPS UNDER FEATHER QUILT

Without a contest Nee-Chee wins the title of "most extraordinariest" rooster. He sleeps under a feather quilt, uses a napkin, lies down for prayers and squawks when his favorite radio programs are turned off.

The pet of Harvey Phillips, 12, of McKeesport, Pennsylvania, Nee-Chee has never seen another chicken.

"I bought him when he was two weeks old and we spent our first 60 days in quarantine," said Harvey. "I had chickenpox and measles. That started it. Now Nee-Chee sleeps with me, reads the comics one picture at a time, kisses us good-night, rides on my bicycle handlebars and roller skates.

"When Mother tries to scold me he flies at her stockings. That's what I call a pal!"

Nee-Chee takes cod-liver oil and prefers bananas, dill pickles and mint candy. His beak is trimmed by a dentist. Once a month he gets a bath and goes to bed to dry.

"A man offered me $50, but I wouldn't sell Nee-Chee," Harvey says.

"Two months ago Nee-Chee woke us up by crowing in the middle of the night. A man was trying to crawl in one of our windows and Mother beat him off with a poker.

"Now Nee-Chee won't let anyone in the house. Everything is delivered to us through the kitchen window."

ALMOST 3,000,000 SCOUTS

Boy Scout world census figures for 1937, just compiled by the International Bureau, reveal a new record increase of 340,000. The figures bring the world total membership to 2,812,074. The last world census, taken in 1935, gave a total of 2,472,014. Scouting is active today in 49 countries, counting the British Empire as one.

RUFFED GROUSE IS HARBINGER OF SPRINGTIME

Wing Thunder Announces One of Alberta's Loveliest Game Birds

Following is the second in a series of nature talks on the bird life of Alberta, which the Edmonton Bulletin will feature on the Young People's Page from time to time. Watch for a succeeding installment dealing with the ruffed grouse or, as it is more generally known, the bush partridge.—THE EDITOR.

Although the ruffed grouse, better known in Alberta as the "bush partridge", does not leave the country in the winter, it is a sure harbinger of spring—as certain as even the welcome bluebird—but a lot noisier.

Other birds have their "spring song", but from the grouse we get the "drums of spring." Everywhere in the Alberta woods when the poplars are showing their first green, you hear the throbbing thunder of the "drums of spring," as though savages were staging a war-dance deep in the forest.

The sound can be heard not far from the city, in some of the ravines along the river between Government House and White Mud creek. For though the partridge is to be seen more often in the deep woods, it is not afraid of civilization when it can get the sort of surroundings it likes — evergreen thickets in low-lying, sheltered spaces. In the afternoons, it is often to be seen sunning and dust-bathing on some woodland trail.

HANDSOME APPEARANCE

The grouse is a striking bird, with heavy mottled plumage and shining dark ruff around the neck. It is from that pretty ruff of metallic sheen that the bird gets its name.

Boys who want to test their woodcraft should try to locate it by following the noise of its drumming in the spring. It is hard to catch unawares, however. It always stands on a fallen log to drum, which is done by beating the wings back and forth at tremendous speed until they become a blur.

The sound begins with a preliminary rustle of the "drum" as the bird appears to be getting limbered up; then comes the rapid drumming, fading away into a few disjointed beats.

Hunters consider that the ruffed grouse has the sweetest meat of all our game birds, and it is a pity that it is hunted so much out of season.

Mary's Lamb Follows Nursery Tale

You know the rest of the nursery rhyme, but seeing is believing. Here is Mary Anastos, of Nantasket Beach, Mass., with her lamb "Chico" actually arriving at school. Mary's pet follows her everywhere she goes.

The Junior Authors' Club

Hello, Junior Authors! The editor, who has been away holidaying for the past two weeks, is pleased to greet you one and all once again. To be sure—you didn't miss the editor, for the job of getting out the corner was very efficiently done by others, but the editor wants you to know that we certainly missed you. We would have liked to have taken all of you along to see the mountains and the lakes in the clouds and the beautiful bears, but since that was impossible perhaps we should tell you a little about our trip. We visited Banff and Lake Louise and at Banff swam in the sulphur hot springs where water as warm as your bath flows from the earth into huge pools.

Lake Louise is situated high in the mountains, which seem to hem it in on all sides, and it is kept perpetually chilled by streams which flow from Victoria Glacier—sheet of ice and snow. The lake is a beautiful sheet of water, of an indescribable green in color, and hues of purple, mauve, rose and blue play over its surface with every ripple of the water, and every shadow from a passing cloud.

But it was the bears at Banff in which you might have been most interested. Uncaged, they come trundling out of the woods to grovel among the scraps thrown on the garbage grounds every afternoon.

There is an excellent museum at Banff which perhaps all of you will be privileged to see some day, and near it is a zoo in which many varieties of wild animals are kept. The editor liked best the huge white polar bear which lives in a cool den built of rocks and splashes in and out of an icy fountain during warm days.

The editor visited him just at feeding time, when the keeper was tossing him bucketsful of fish, meat and apples, the diet on which he thrives best. As he scrambled into the fountain to retrieve a piece of frozen fish and came out shaking the drops from his huge furry self until a rainbow glowed around him, or as he raised himself to sit and beg for another apple, the editor thought he was the finest animal that one could ever see.

But now the editor is using all the space to tell you about the trip, and unless we are very careful there will not be room for letters from the Junior Authors at all. That wouldn't be fair, would it? So here is the first letter from a Junior Author—Barbara Dale Smith, Box 204, Wetaskiwin.

"Dear Editor:

"I am sending in a story called "Bob's adventure." I am enjoying my holidays. However, I always have time to read the corner. I would like Mable Pon's address if you would please print it. I would also like to mention that I have not yet received my badge.

"Yours sincerely,
"Barbara Dale Smith."

BOB'S ADVENTURE

One day Dad and Bob went shooting. To get to the field they had to go through the woods. They reached the middle of the woods. Suddenly they heard a growling noise. Dad turned around and there was a bear looking at them. Dad took his gun and was just going to shoot when Bob grasped his arm.

"Dad, don't shoot," he said, look at the little cub."

Dad put the gun down and looked at the cub. The bear charged at them. Dad shot the bear twice through the head. The cub was too frightened to move. Bob ran up to the cub. The cub snuggled close to Bob. Dad said Bob could take it home. Bob kept the strange pet and it became happy in its new home.

* * *

Thank you very much for the letter and the story, Barbara. The editor is very sorry to have neglected to send your button before this, but will send it right away and you should have it in a day or so. Write again, won't you?

* * *

Now comes a letter from Judith Lake of 12210 109A avenue, Edmonton. Judith says:

"Dear Editor:

"I like your page so much that I miss it when I go on my holidays. This year I went to the Calgary stampede. The horses are the finest I have ever seen and the cowboys wear real big hats and chapps on their legs. Mother bought my brother and I one of those three-cornered kerchiefs all the cowboys wear. I would like to be a real cowgirl, but then I have no place to learn so I guess I will just have to keep on going to school.

"My brother will write you a letter when he has time. He is nine years old and I am eleven.

"Yours sincerely,
"Judith Lake."

* * *

Welcome to the club, Judith. That was a most interesting letter telling about your holidays. To you and to the other new pals whose names are still on the list the editor will send a Junior Author's button and a pink and black membership card. Tell your friends to write for one, too. Goodbye for today.

THE EDITOR.

Yesterday: Pat decides that Bob's dog, Schmatz, can be used as an excuse to bring the young couple together.

CHAPTER III

LIFTING the dog in his arms, Pat rapped at Kathleen's door. When she opened it, he managed a worried expression. "Look, Miss Kathy, would ye be so kind as to keep him till his master gits back. He belongs to the new man upstairs, Mr. Bob McTavish. He's a writer or something. Quite a likely young feller I'd say."

The girl held out her arms delightedly. "Of course I'll keep him. Be glad to. I saw him on the stairs when they were moving in up there. Isn't he cute? His master's away you say?"

"Well Schmatz couldn't git in. That's the dog's name," Pat answered evasively. "I'll tell him where the terrier is directly. Rhymes goin' all right?"

"I guess so." She sighed a little. "I've got down to green, queen, sheen. Maybe the dog can help. His eyes look bright enough to think up something."

She shut the door and Pat shook his head and went back to his sweeping. After he finished, he trudged heavily up the stairs and knocked on Bob's door. The young man stuck his head out.

"Oh, hello," he said. "Say, seen anything of my dog? I let him out quite a while ago."

"I see the girl downstairs takin' him in, I think," Pat answered grevely. "She's got studio number one. Thought I'd jist tell ye."

"Thanks. I'll run right down and get him." Bob started for the stairs. Pat grinned. "It's a grand little gurl she is now. Had that studio quite a while. Writes rhymes or something."

"Oh a poet!"

"Well if green rhymes with queen, she is," answered the Irishman sagely and picked up his dustpan. He watched Bob knock at Kathleen's door.

* * *

Inside studio one, Schmatz hurled himself delightedly at his master, while Kathleen looked on with a smile.

"Positive proof that you're Mr. McTavish," she said. Then went on to explain how she happened to have the dog, adding, "And I'm Kathleen O'Shan, in case you want to prosecute me for stealing him."

Bob smiled back at her. She made a pretty picture in her neat apron, a ready smile playing around ruddy lips. Quite the prettiest thing he had seen since he came to the city, he decided. "You say the janitor brought the dog to you?" he asked. When she nodded, "I see. Pat seems to have the welfare of his tenants very much at heart. He said you were a poet."

"Oh no," Kathleen hastened to correct him. "Nothing so arty as that. Besides I've got to support myself. I do greeting cards for a living. You know, valentines, birthdays, mother's day cards, friendship cards and all that. Sometimes it's fun and sometimes it's an awful headache, especially about now when it gets near bill time. I get to worrying, then I can't rhyme anything but due and blue."

"You mean to say you actually make a business of selling those cards? I always supposed they just printed them. Never thought about the people who must write them."

"Well, you can think about me doing it now." Kathleen's tone held an edge. "Pat said you were a writer, too. I suppose you do books, or these stories that're all dressed up with pictures in the big magazines."

* * *

Bob picked up the dog and leaned back against the kitchenet wall, smiling up at her. "Pat's a regular information bureau, isn't he? And of course I did ask for that last remark, after what I said about greeting cards. But you're wrong, lady, dead wrong. I've got to eat, too, you know. That's why I write for the pulps."

Bob picked up the dog and leaned back, smiling at Kathleen. "Yes, do come tonight and bring Schmatz. Maybe he could find a rhyme for bone," she said.

Kathleen looked mystified.

"You know the kill-'em-on-every-page kind. Sheriff's posses, master detectives, deadly crooks rampant in every paragraph. It's a great life. My menu's governed solely by the number of words I sell in a month. Ten thousand words, bean soup. Twenty thousand, maybe a pork chop, and once when I caught one editor just after he had come out of an anesthetic or something, and he paid me a prize of $500, I ate a whole turkey dinner all at one time."

A dimple showed at the corner of Kathleen's mouth, and she fished a pencil out of the pocket of her apron and inspected it closely. "I can make good bean soup," she remarked irrelevantly.

Bob leaned forward eagerly. "So what?" he asked.

"Yes, do come tonight and bring Schmatz. Maybe he could find a rhyme for bone."

"And if he did of course that would be doggerel, wouldn't it?" laughed Bob, and made for the door.

As he ran up the steps, the janitor was still working in the upper hall. Bob reached in his pocket. "Here, buy yourself some tobacco, Pat. You're a discriminating person."

The old man grinned. "How many rhymes do you think it takes to pay her rint? Too bad that agent don't have to try thinkin' thim up himself."

Bob waved his arm dramatically. "If he did he'd probably end by sending her a note saying, 'It's Patrick's idea now indade. Dear loidy, that yer rint is paid.' Maybe we can suggest it to him." His door banged shut.

* * *

But although he resolutely sat down to his typewriter, it was not so easy to close the door of his mind. Certain black-lashed eyes of Irish blue kept coming between him and the villain. His own eyes strayed frequently to his clock without his being able to do much about it, and in the back of his mind lay the warming thought that he was going to see her again soon.

Studio one was feeling the effects of his visit, too. Kathleen tried desperately to think of her verse. But it was no use. In spite of the impending rent bill, a happy song kept bubbling from her lips, and the flavor of bean soup became much more important than how many rhythmic beats a line might have. She kept jumping up and rearranging the gay dishes she had put on a table in one corner of the room, muttering.

"Hair — fair —" Reading her rhymes out loud had got Kathleen into the habit of talking to herself. "What nice blond hair he had — the way it waved back from his forehead—oh, dear, this hasn't a thing Irish about it! Bob McTavish—that's Scotch. Almost Irish, but — well, if I don't get in some checks soon, I'll not be here long anyway, so what the dickens!" She flopped down into her chair once more and firmly reached for a sheet of paper.

But if Kathleen was finding it distracting that Bob had taken the studio upstairs, the Duchess too was very much aware that the room across from her had been rented. Now she languidly knocked the ashes from her cigaret and remarked to a tall dark man with exaggerated sideburns, who was leaning over her easel:

"Rather a good-looking new tenant has just moved in. I must certainly get acquainted with him."

1000 Attend Visitors' Day At University

More than one thousand persons visited the colorful gardens of the University of Alberta just back of the residences of the University when, on Friday afternoon and evening, a display of gladoili, roses and fruits, the products of the care and experimentation of the University horticultural department were shown to the public.

The purpose of the show which is held annually, is to acquaint growers and gardeners with the various types of flowers and plants that can be grown in and around Edmonton, and to give valuable and expert advice upon the production of plants.

Gladioli, more than four hundred types, blossoms in tones of reds, purple, yellow and snow whites—or in the pastel shades, heliotrope, salmon rose, was a fragrant high spot of the show and lovely background for the exhibition, standing as they were in their colorful plots.

ROSE DISPLAY

Roses in all their various beautiful shades were seen blooming in their long rows, forming a veritable color of bloom and fragrance. There are three hundred types of roses in the gardens.

Displays of growing dahlias, sweet peas reaching to a height of more than seven feet, of large and delicate petals attracted much of the enthusiastic comment of the visitors.

APPLE GROWING

Apple growing in Edmonton is still a surprise to some people but not to the visitors on Friday afternoon who were shown the types and varieties that can be grown in Alberta. Apples, some a golden yellow and others turning a rosy red were seen hanging from the trees.

JASPER JOTTINGS

By FAY PARKER

JASPER, Aug. 21—The thirteenth annual fair of the Jasper Women's Institute was a noteworthy success, and particularly outstanding were the variety and perfection of the vegetables grown in Jasper gardens. Cucumbers, perfect roots of celery, tomatoes, peas, and in fact all manner of garden produce displayed in the Jasper Fair, would have done credit to farming communities much further south in the province. When one considers that every bit of soil used to grow these things is brought by the load into the townsite, it is all the more remarkable. The display on Wednesday afternoon was the finest and most diversified that has ever been shown in this Rocky Mountain town. The floral display was also a revelation to visitors as to what can be produced here in the way of beauty. The household arts, cooking, needlework, and arts and crafts were also of a very high order, and the exhibition of the boys' and girls' work was the finest produced up to date. Indeed the judges had a most difficult time awarding the prizes in the various classes. They were: Mr. J. Edenborough and Mr. J. Grassick, horticulture; Mrs. J. K. Cornwall and Miss Rowan, needlework; Mrs. Neil McLean, cooking; Miss Klinke and Miss Berwick, arts and crafts; Mrs. Sinclair and Mrs. Rowan, boys' and girls' work.

Mrs. Pugh, Mrs. Howe and Mrs. Noyes were in charge of the 40 classes entered under horticulture; Mrs. Milner, Mrs. E. Cottam, and Mrs. J. Brody, of the 31 classes entered in needlework; Mrs. Robson, Mrs. R. Gibson and Mrs. J. Fahey, of the 27 classes in cooking; Mrs. Cunningham, Mrs. B. Morris and Miss Ruth Guthridge 31, classes in Arts and crafts; and Mrs. F. Bryant, and Mrs. R. D. McConnell of the boys' and girls' work, which included 46 different classes of work. Miss Rena King won the first prize for original essay open to the high school, with Miss K. Hartley second, and Miss Roxy Andrews, third.

Prizes for best lawns went to Mr. H. E. Johnstone, J. Robson and D. Mahood; best flower gardens: J. Kierstead, R. D. Britton, and J. Cox; best vegetable gardens: Mrs. J. Milner, J. Cox and R. D. Britton; best collections of vegetables: J. Cox, J. Milner and Mrs. C. Milner; window boxes: Mrs. J. Milner, H. E. Johnstone, and W. Coupland; rock gardens: H. E. Johnstone, Bill Duncan and B. Morris.

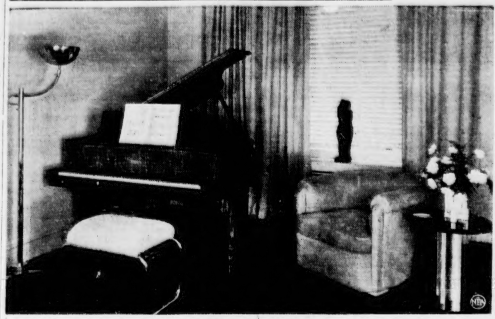
New Piano Is Last Word In Decoration



The last stronghold of conservatism has fallen before the onslaughts of modernism—the music room. In his New York apartment (above) Donald Desky, famous designer, has installed what is hailed as the first truly modern piano, the case of which he designed. In two-toned walnut, it fits nicely against a background of heavy raw silk curtains, white Venetian blinds and walls and six pieces of furniture, upholstered in black and white handwoven material.

the social round . . . . .

Next time one of your friends, who is an ardent fan of Americanism tells you that that well groomed look comes from across the line and to be really smart you must save your pennies and buy your wardrobe during that brief two weeks vacation you can disagree, telling them the opinion of Miss Ethel Munroe of Regina, who has just returned from New York where she attended the summer dance congress in that city. Miss Munroe says "Canadian girls are better groomed and have more personality than American girls. The girls from the United States in the class were mostly about 16 or 17 years of age, but universally looked between eight and nine years older, had tired expressions and lacked the sparkle of the Canadian girl, who really is the one sought after eagerly for show jobs and other positions as well."

So there you are girls and if you want to "crash the gates" of the show world in New York, just buy your wardrobe in Canada, don it, and with that inherent sparkle and vividness you'll be bound to step right out in front of your American rival and "get that job."

WILL O' THE WISP

She said if she could only go
Away from stress and strife,
To seek cathedral silences
And lead a quiet life
Amid the sylvan solitude
Her thoughts would then take root,
The songs within her clever brain
Would nevermore be mute.

Deeply she mused where silver streams
Down jagged mountains glide,
Entranced by wild bird melody
And then, ah then, she sighed.
The summer waned, and back she came.
The muse—elusive, quiet—
Her new gold pencil still unused
Her notebook spotless white.
—Ethel Erroll Boyd.

Born at Agra, India in sight of the Taj Maham, Mrs. Broder was educated in England, specializing in music at the royal College in London, and after a brilliant career as musician and critic came to Canada.

Musical critic of the Calgary Herald for more than 20 years, Mrs. Broder represented Canada at the Anglo-American musical conference in Lausanne, Switzerland, in 1934. She had contributed many articles on western Canada to eastern newspapers.

Visitor Tells Of Home Life In Far North

"Cans . . . cans . . . and then more cans . . ." That is what Mrs. Ernest Paisley of Cambridge, Victoria Island, N.W.T., who is in Edmonton for a short time, on the first lap of her visit "out", the guest of Mrs. Pat Ryan, told a Bulletin reporter this morning. "We eat out of cans until we look like them," she laughed. "In the winter if we are lucky we get the odd bit of caribou, and we like seal quite well, but we get terribly tired of fish."

"Our home is an ordinary small frame one, quite small, and in the winter the Indians cover it over with snow to make it sturdier against the winter, but even then when the wind blows it is like a blizzard. We heat with coal ranges and have no wood at all up there but we manage to save the packing cases for kindling."

Thus, quite informally and charmingly, she told of how women in the North keep their houses and look after their families. Washing, ironing, etc., certainly are problems as we found out.

"Drying our clothes in the winter is about the worst thing we have to put up with. We dry them in the house and then have to put up with the natives coming around and handling them.

"This last winter I didn't fair so badly because there were two other ladies there which made my life a little less lonesome. We usually managed to get around to one another's for tea and the odd bridge game.

NO CONVENIENCES

"We have no conveniences and in the summer we haul our water from the lake about one-quarter of a mile distant and in the winter we cut blocks of ice and have to melt them on the range."

Mrs. Paisley has one small daughter, June, aged five and one-half, and when asked how June stood the cold Mrs. Paisley answered, "I would stand her up against any child you have here!"

June has her dolls which help to while away the long hours and she dresses them in fur parkas and little fur mukluks. When she goes out herself she is dressed from head to foot in fur and in the house both she and her mother wear heavy wool skirts and wool sweaters.

Mrs. Paisley will visit in Edmonton for two months, and at the end of that time she intends to travel around and have a real good holiday.

Velvet Frocks Are Favorites This Season

Velvet is THE material for fall and winter wear . . . it's a headliner for any and all occasions . . . day-time, formal evening wear and short dancing frocks.

Day-time suits are featured in "mat velvet" and are often richly furred. The most popular one is a beauty with a seven-eighths length coat . . . but the shorter ones are just as smart. A few velvet blouses have made their appearance and do much to richen up a wool suit.

The majority of evening gowns are either of velvet or with a wealth of velvet trim. There are some startling combinations of several colored velvets pieced together in a modernistic design. For this the crush resistant velvet is used.

Velvets are sometimes combined with chiffon and lace insertions, in a smooth sheath, with a split skirt. Full skirts are fitted to the knees and fall, full, to the ground.

Evening capes as always are good in velvet and a few this season are lavishly banded with white fox and ermine.

Military touches are being used a lot with day costumes with plastron or hussar revers buttoned on in a different color from the coat or suit.

Tulle evening gowns are almost covered with appliqued flowers of velvet. Wide girdle belts of crushed velvet on a sheer black wool frock add to its style and charm.

There is a great variety of short waltz frocks, with ruched hem. There are some skirts, full, of net, and some entirely embroidered corselet gowns, with the new lowering waist-line or off the shoulder stiff lame renaissance gowns.

RANFURLY BRIDE TO MAKE HOME IN KITSCOTY

Ranfurly Presbyterian church was the scene of a very pretty wedding one day recently, when Rev. Andrew Walker of Lloydminster solemnized the marriage of Muriel Gladys MacNaughton daughter of Mr. and Mrs. MacNaughton of Ranfurly, to Mr. Roy Rodney Fraser, son of Mr. and Mrs. Rodney Fraser of Alberni, British Columbia.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father to the strains of the Lohengrin's Wedding March played by Mr. James McMath, and made a charming picture in her gown of white triple sheer georgette. Her veil was of embroidered net held to the head by a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of pastel sweet peas.

She was attended by her sister, Mrs. C. D. Tait as matron-of-honor, who wore white and carried a nosegay of sweet peas. Miss Jessie Inge of Lloydminster as bridesmaid wore yellow georgette and carried asters in pastel shades.

Mr. Fred Lornie of Vegreville was best man. Mr. C. D. Tait and Mr. Norman MacNaughton were ushers.

Mrs. MacNaughton, mother of the bride was very smart in a gown of deep blue with white, and wore a corsage of red snap-dragons.

A reception for twenty guests at the home of the bride's parents was held after the ceremony. A three tiered wedding cake surrounded with fern and forget-me-nots centred the bride's table.

Mr. and Mrs. Fraser left for the coast after the reception, and upon their return will make their home at Kitscoty. For travelling the bride wore smart coat of rosewood over a frock of brown figured silk, with which she wore brown accessories.

Contract Bridge

By WM. E. McKENNEY

When declarer bids two suits, and the opponent in the lead opens a trump, it quite generally indicates strength and length in the unsuccessfully bid suit, and thus a desire to reduce dummy's ruffing power. The play often proves the one means of defeating an otherwise easy contract, although it does tip off declarer as to where cards in which he is interested are located.

SOLUTION TO PREVIOUS CONTRACT PROBLEM

South	West	North	East
1 ♦	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♣	Pass	2 N. T	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	4 ♣	Pass
5 ♣	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead—♣ 10.

Today's hand was played by Charles C. Harvey, of Boston, who is recognized as one of New England's outstanding contract stars. He had to utilize the entire strength of the combined hands, plus the information unwillingly given by the opening lead to fulfil his contract.

Harvey won the opening lead in his own hand, and decided to play West for strength in diamonds, in view of the trump opening. If either opponent held four trumps, or if West held five diamonds, the hand could not be made anyway.

Contract Problem
(Solution in next issue)

South's contract is four hearts. He has to lose one spade and possibly two diamonds. With an opening spade lead and continuance of that suit, can he hold his losses to three tricks, even if West holds a trick in trumps?

	♠ 7 6 3 ♥ K 7 6 2 ♦ 6 5 3 ♣ A Q 8
♠ Q J 10 ♥ J 10 9 3 ♦ K Q 8 ♣ 7 5 2	N W E S Dealer	♠ K 9 8 5 4 ♥ None ♦ 10 9 4 2 ♣ J 10 4 3
	♠ A 2 ♥ A Q 8 5 4 ♦ A J 7 ♣ K 9 6

Duplicate—N. & S. vul.
Opener—♠ Q.

The second trick was won with the ace of diamonds, and this was followed with the queen. When West played the seven, a spade was discarded from dummy. Another diamond followed and West false carded with the king, but declarer refused to be fooled and ruffed with the ace of trump. East discarded a spade. The ace of spades was now cashed, and a small spade ruffed. Now another diamond was led and dummy trumped. When East refused to overruff a third spade was led and ruffed in the closed hand. Now the high trump was led, followed by the established diamonds, and East and West won only two tricks, the high trump and the ace of hearts.

Encores for Veal In Varied Costume

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX

Roast stuffed veal is good to eat and not expensive to buy. But there's always a little left over. Stage a second appearance with all the flavor of the first plus a difference in seasonings and consistency. It makes a dramatic dinner act.

VEAL CROQUETTES

(4 to 6 servings)

Four cups cooked shoulder of veal, 2 cups boiled rice, 1 teaspoon salt, ½ egg, ½ teaspoon pepper.

Grind veal, add rice, egg, salt, pepper and milk to moisten. Form into croquettes, roll in cracker dust and chill. Fry in deep fat. Add white sauce. Serve with new green peas and grilled tomato.

VEAL PIE

(4 to 6 servings)

Four cups cooked veal, 2 cups boiling water, ½ onion, ⅜ cup flour.

Cut cold veal in half inch cubes. Put in kettle with onion and water. Simmer one hour in steamer. Mix flour with cold water and stir into hot liquid. Bring to boiling point, season and cover with biscuit crust. Bake in hot oven (450 degrees F.).

CRUST

Two cups flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, ¾ teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons lard or other fat.

With two knives cut shortening into the flour which has been sifted with salt and baking powder. When well blended, add enough milk to make a soft dough. Serve with carrots (julienne) and buttered zucchini.

CASSEROLE OF VEAL

(4 to 6 servings)

Three cups diced veal, 1 cup potato, ½ cup carrots, ½ cup diced peas.

Mix with gravy left over from roast. Put chopped onion in if desired. Cover with breaded crumbs, and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.). A mixed salad to be served with this.

VEAL PAPRIKA

(4 to 6 servings)

One-third cup chopped onion, ¼ cup green pepper, 3 tablespoons butter, 3 tablespoons flour, 2-3 cup stock, 1 1-3 cups strained tomato, 4 cups diced veal, ⅛ teaspoon celery salt, 2-3 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, 1-3 teaspoon paprika.

Cook onion and green pepper in butter slowly until soft. Stirring often, add flour, stir until smooth, add stock and strained tomato, cook until smooth and thick. Add diced veal and seasoning. Serve parsley potato balls and frenched string beans.

Tomorrow's Menu

BREAKFAST: Sliced peaches, cream, sauted kidneys on toast, buttered toast, coffee, milk.

LUNCHEON: Cabbage and green apple salad, sliced hot corn bread, tea, plums, milk.

DINNER: Veal croquettes, souffle potatoes, peas with fresh mint, tomato and watercress salad, chocolate cream pie, coffee, milk.

Debunker

By John Harvey Furbay, Ph.D.

I B.C. AND I A.D. WERE NOT A YEAR APART
I B.C.
I A.D.
8-24

According to our calendar, one would naturally assume that between the year 1 B.C. and the year 1 A.D. there should be a year called zero. As a matter of fact, no such year exists, as far as historians are concerned, and the year 1 A.D. follows directly after the year 1 B.C. A person born in 3 B.C. would not be five years old at 2 A.D., but would be 4 years old when one calculates dates in that period. When adding B.C. and A.D. years, it is necessary to always subtract one to compensate for the year zero omitted between 1 B.C. and 1 A.D.

Your Children

By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

Eighteen years is a long time to gather material for a book, especially if you are providing your own proofs. Yet Dr. Arnold Gesell and Dr. Frances L. Ilg of the Yale Clinic of Child Development, have done this very thing, and we have the answer in a new volume called "Feeding Behavior of Infants."

O. R. Barton

The first third of the work goes to show the thoroughness with which these scientists have made their deductions after working with hundreds of young subjects; the greater part, however, is a revelation of that obscure subject, "appetite," and the still more elusive subject of behavior. The whole is a "systematic account of feeding through the first years."

I mention it now because it is the first book of its kind that has come to my notice. And besides, it is new and revealing. It gives, for example, sensible deductions about the vagaries of child appetite, the why's and the wherefore's that worry so many mothers.

"NOURISHING" PERSONALITY

One thing is proved, that youngsters have preferences, or dislikes, of certain foods from purely natural causes.

The baby will turn from his favorite cereal in his first year, quite often. In the second year, with wider range, he will again discard and adopt.

Methods of primitive eating these authors consider entirely natural to the young child, and habits that parents are prone to punish are not faults in the elast. The ever-present battle of the cup and the spoon may affect the eater, either for or against food. Introduction of new foods depends upon the "readiness of the child to adapt himself."

Habits of the hand are due to the gestures of eating, we learn, and the personality of the growing child largely has its roots in food attitude.

I believe that at last we have found the key to certain mysteries. And as I never mention a writing that I think is not good for "my mothers," this work has the honor of taking full place in this column.

WAY FOR ALL TO READ IT

As so many intelligent mothers have not the wherewithal to buy books of their own, on child training, child care and feeding, I suggest an idea; which is the community club, whose members could contribute movie money, a quarter or half dollar, toward the price of certain reliable volumes. These reference books could then be read by everyone and kept in a place of easy access to all. Book shops and libraries would be glad to assist in the choice.

With a small library at hand, the mother will feel surer, and worry less, about the unexplained "difference" of her child. She will also understand small John and Jean better, and work accordingly.

The volume I mention today would be a worth-while addition to such a set of books. It is, by the way, $4.50, published by Lippincott.

STEYNING, Sussex—A motorist complained in court that after he ran over a dog belonging to Miss Patricia Mathers she punched him on the nose, jumped on his back and tried to throttle him. She was fined $10.

DOROTHY DIX Says:

TO THOSE of us who believe that the good of the race and the welfare of our country depend upon permanent marriages and better and more stable homes, it is heartening to learn that so many of our leading colleges are establishing courses in matrimony where the young will be taught the art and science of picking out their mates and living in harmony with them.

This is a long step in the right direction in educational progress. For it is far more important that husbands and wives should speak the same language than that they should be conversant with Latin and Greek. What the young married man needs is not a degree in higher mathematics, but how to juggle dimes so they will cover a budget. And no accomplishment a girl can have will be so valuable as skill in rubbing her nervous and irritable spouse's hair the right way.

Still and all, while deeply appreciating the matrimonial educational advantages offered by these institutions that propose to turn out a superior grade of M.A.'s and P.A.'s, is does strike one's funny bone that girls and boys have to go to school to learn about marriage, since every one of them is the result of marriage, and that from the hour of their births they have lived in homes that were laboratories in which every possible experiment of marriage was being worked out.

In reality there isn't a child 5 years old who doesn't know what goes to make a marriage a success or failure. It knows that those marriages are happy in which the husband and wife are congenial, think alike and enjoy doing the same things; and that where they show each other kindness, consideration and affection there are peace and harmony in the household.

The child knows almost in its cradle that a marriage is a failure if the husband and wife are antagonists to each other; if they argue and quarrel over everything and if they say cruel and bitter things to each other. Furthermore, by the time children are adolescent they have sat in judgment on their warring parents. They know which one is to blame, and wonder why Father doesn't pay Mother a few compliments when she would eat out of his hand if he did, and why Mother can't lay off of Father with her nagging and let him have what he wants for dinner without starting something by telling him how bad what he likes is for his digestion.

It is these early impressions that children get of marriage that decides the kind of husbands and wives that they will make, and not what they will be taught in college. For every mother and father are either a shining example or an awful warning to their sons and daughters.

Nearly always a girl treats her husband as her mother treated her father. If Mother was a good housekeeper and a frugal manager; if she petted and made much of Father and did everything possible to help him and make him happy, it is a safe bet that daughter will make the same sort of wife that Mother did.

If Mother regarded Father merely as a meal ticket; if she was whining and complaining and extravagant, the chances are that her daughter will also think that husbands are only useful as bill-payers.

If a man treats his wife with tenderness and consideration and generosity, so will his sons treat their wives in the great majority of cases, just as the son is apt to follow the example of the father who has made a doormat of his wife.

But there are exceptions to this rule of like mother like daughter, like father like son. One of the most peaceful homes I was ever in belonged to a woman who had been reared in a house of strife, and in her revulsion from it would not permit even an argument in hers. I have known girls who were so sorry for their henpecked fathers they spoiled their own husbands to death. And men who had pitied their own mothers' hard lots so much that they treated their wives like queens.

The things that we learn at our mothers' knees we never forget. They really teach us how to be husbands and wives. DOROTHY DIX.

What To Do

Will you please give me details about serving an informal dinner? Should service plates be on the table all the time? Which is correct—to place the napkin at the left side of the plate, or on it? And how should the napkin be folded? Thank you so much for this kindness. MRS. L. W. E.

Answer—No, service plates remain on the table only until the main dinner course is served. If the first course is all appetizer followed by soup, both courses are served on the service plate, the main course being served on a dinner plate. If something cold is served first, this course may be on the table when the meal is announced, and the napkin will then be placed at the left side of the service plate; but if the first course is a hot soup, then the napkin should be put on the service plate and the soup served after the guests are seated. When the napkin is placed on the service plate, it is folded flat so that if there is a monogram it will show in the centre of the fold. Otherwise the napkin is generally folded with the hem and selvage parallel to the edge of the table and the forks; the lower right-hand corner is the open corner.

HEART-TO-HEART TALKS

By Kathleen Norris

Woman Faces Grim Reality In Jealous Man

DEAR MRS. NORRIS: The gist of my whole question is: if a man is jealous before marriage, is a girl foolish to trust her happiness to him? Myself, I don't know what jealousy is. I'm one of four, three adoring brothers have spoiled me all my life; I've always had pretty much what I wanted, but I don't think it's been unreasonable or selfish. I love my wonderful mother and clever doctor father, and a host of relatives and friends, in fact, I love life!

"Now I'm engaged to one Anthony Smith, also a doctor, handsome, successful, popular—and jealous. He loves me so much that he hates to share me with anyone; he glowers if someone comes up to speak to me at the country club—someone he doesn't know, I mean. He asks me not to call my brother's baby 'sweetheart,' because he says that is his name for me. When I was in a play recently he came behind the scenes every one of the three nights and stood guard, hurrying people through their congratulations, and hurrying me off to have supper alone with him.

"I loved Tony like a big brother when I was six, adored him at twelve, fell genuinely in love with him when I came back from college, and haven't changed since. I want to marry him, want to spend every moment of my life with him. And as far as this jealousy goes today, I rather like it. So many girls are in love with Tony, and indeed more than one older woman, too, that it is thrilling and flattering to me to have him so completely at my feet. But sometimes it makes my mother a little uneasy, and she worries about the future. What do you think of it? Not but what I fully intend to pronounce the 'I do' in a voice that will be heard throughout the entire church next September. But I would like to know what you think. DIANA."

Dear Diana: I do not think it makes very much difference what I think or what I say. You are bound to marry this man; you would feel your life crippled and these long years of devotion wasted if you did anything else. A series of romantic sequences have carried you along so far; sequences including a loving father and mother, devoted brothers, admiring friends, successes and pleasures made all the more agreeable by wealth, position, beauty, youth, popularity and a natural sweetness of nature.

Such Men Can't Be Cured

If you marry Tony, or rather when you marry Tony, you will come up against one of life's grimmest realities. You will have much else to console you, to compensate you for this real and burning trial. But the jealousy of your husband will come between you and every natural and happy action of your life, and you will have to discount all the delight of the new position, the new dignities, the forthcoming joy of motherhood, because of it.

There is no curing such a man, no shaming, no argument and no reason. He will destroy the satisfaction you might otherwise have in the loveliest of new frocks, the most distinguished of dinner parties. Your trip abroad with him will be blighted because odious Joneses are on board, and you persist in being so agreeable to them. Your friendship with a charming pair of new friends in Paris or London must be sacrificed because they make so much of you and don't seem to know he's alive. The invitation to take the lead in "The Royal Family" or "Private Lives" must be refused by you, because he will be damned again if he wants his wife to make a show of herself before a lot of the village fools. He probably will be jealous of his children; one such man recently refused his wife her right to nurse their new-born son, because he "wanted the boy to learn that he couldn't monopolize his mother." Every word you say must be considered, measured with this infirmity of his in mind; you will find yourself saying in an undertone to your friends, "Praise Tony's golf game, too. Tell Tony you're only asking me to get him. Darling, thank Daddy first, and run to meet him and say we missed him."

You'll do all this for peace, and to make him happy, and your own life easier. And after awhile it will be habit, and if your love builds itself into a firm background of home and children, prosperity and dignity and mutual respect, it won't be too high a price to pay. But to go into it knowing that the course of sacrifice, consideration, patience, forgiveness for his jealousy is your only alternative to divorce.

When an engaged man's jealousy is merely a matter of sex a few months of happy married life will end it. But this man is jealous of your very life, your family and friends, your interests and activities, and for that there is no cure.

* * *

On my desk here is a very tragic letter from Sally, whose whole life has gone with great suddenness on the rocks. Or at least Sally feels that it has. She was married a year ago to her ideal man, a clever, quiet, affectionate fellow who carried her off to a lonely mountain mine, where he is to be stationed for several years. She loves the free lonely life, adores her big Nelson, and would be a completely happy women but for a talk they chanced to have a few weeks ago.

"When we were married I really didn't know much of Nelson's background," this disconsolated Sally writes. "He was best man at a wedding; I was maid-of-honor; it was only moments before we were talking like old friends. After that he came to see me at home five or six times—wonderful times! And then we were engaged. He says he never has loved any other woman—I believe that still. But a few nights ago, while we were talking by the fire, he admitted—or rather, casually observed, for it wasn't in the nature of a confession at all—that he had had several love affairs with girls in college years, thought that was the only healthy thing to do, and was not ready to believe me when I told him that that had not been my idea at all while I was at the university.

"Mrs. Norris," the letter goes on, "the ground seemed to rock under me. Nelson, so shy, so gentle, so completely happy in his own home, so devoted to me! To have him talk in this coarse—this ultra modern way—shocked me beyond all belief! And to know that I am to have a child added to my despair. After a stormy scene I locked myself into my room, and the next day left for my mother's home where I am all alone now, as mother and dad and my sister are in Europe. I am living in a large shuttered city house with three servants in it, and telling friends that I have come down to see the doctor.

He hates to share me with anyone; he glowers if someone comes up to speak to me at the country club. When I was in a play recently he came behind the scenes and stood guard.

Expectant Mother Deserts Talkative Husband

"My condition accounts for my wretched appearance, for I have been lying awake nights to cry with utter despair. How can I ever go back to a man who not only admits his conquests, but claims that such conduct is actually wise from a hygienic and psychopathic standpoint? And if I don't go back, my life is wrecked.

"I had many warm friendships with men in college, and many a 'moonlight and roses' stroll that was full of romance. But there is a line that any woman can quite simply establish if she wants to, and no man ever made me feel unpopular or a prig because I respected that line. I knew that some of the girls in the sorority were not so scrupulous, but what they did didn't seem my business. I lived my own way.

"Now to discover that Nelson would like me quite as much if I had done the other thing, would feel that I was just a little more 'normal' (his very word!) if I had been a little more weak, seems to upset everything I have ever believed of life and morals. Saddest of all is that I love him so dearly and miss him so terribly. But CAN a woman creep back to a man who has so outraged her finest sensibilities, and in effect apologize to him for what really demands an apology from him?

"Whatever you say I will do. Shall I wait for mother to come home and discuss it thoroughly with her and dad? Shall I go to Reno and close this whole episode before my poor little baby is born? Shall I ask Nelson to come down—he wants to—and see if there is any happiness to be patched up out of this wretched affair?"

Advised To Forget It

That's part of the letter. My answer is this: Sally, you really do owe Nelson an apology. You owe it because you are not being very smart. If you knew anything of psychology you would know that Nelson's love affairs in college really did not seem important to him, and in the most serious sense therefore were NOT important. Many a man, and especially one who grew up motherless, and exclusively in his father's company, is undeveloped on these questions; most men know the simple truth which women never seem able to grasp, that the love, admiration, honor, loyalty they give in marriage are entirely different emotions and elements from those that actuate the casual sex affairs of earlier years.

Go back to your Nelson; give him a kiss; settle down to wait for your baby, relegate the past entirely and honestly to the past. No one of us can afford to be either his mate's keeper or conscience. In a few years this will seem much less important to you, and, if this baby is a girl, and presently goes in youth and beauty and sweetness to college, it will be Nelson who agonizes for fear the wrong sort of man will get hold of her there.

Men change. The boy who was a healthy, unthinking young animal at twenty may be a model of decorum at forty. And as a final whisper in your ear, Sally, sometimes a shy young husband fortified with wifely love and courage, likes to boast of affairs that never took place.

Vice Regal Party Has Better Luck Fishing In Mountain Streams

INTATA LAKE, B.C., Aug. 21.—Hon. Alastair Buchan yesterday broke this camp's record for heavy trout, catching one weighing two and one half pounds to top a one and three quarter pounder caught a few minutes before by Lord Tweedsmuir, his father.

The vice-regal party fished at Nechacko (Big River) and caught 28 trout, all good sized ones, in an hour and a half.

BACK BY PLANE

His Excellency, Lady Tweedsmuir, Mrs. George Pape, her lady in waiting, Mr. Buchan and Lieut. S. G. Rivers-Smith, aide de camp, were taken to Nechako river by boat and picked up at 4 p.m. by seaplanes which brought them back to camp in time for a tea and reception to the camp staff.

It was the best fishing the vice-regal party had experienced and occurred on what was expected to be their last day in camp.

Their Excellencies received at the tea and the Governor General told the guests how much he had enjoyed his stay at this camp, just outside the B.C. provincial park named two years ago in his honor.

BATTLES FISH

"I hope," he said, "that this splendid country and facilities for sport in the park will attract the very best people from all over the world."

Mr. Buchan said he had a considerable battle with his heaviest trout, playing it for 15 minutes, finally drawing it ashore and pushing it up the bank before he could capture it as he had no landing net handy.

Today the party start to move by seaplane from camp here to Bella Coola on the coast and from there by automobile 40 miles in to Stuie Lodge, where it will remain probably next Thursday, then return to Bella Coola to be greeted by Premier Pattullo, settlers and Indians.

The premier will arrive aboard the Canadian destroyer H.M.C.S. Fraser, and will accompany the party to Ottawa, stopping en route for a few hours at Jasper, Alta., and for two days at Fort William and Port Arthur, Ont.

MACKENZIE COUNTRY

On the flight to Bella Coola the party will soar above the Imiltsa valley, through which Alexander Mackenzie, heroic Scottish explorer, forged his way 144 years ago from the site of the present town of Peace River, Alta.

His Excellency expects to visit the spot where Mackenzie tasted the salt water of the Pacific on South Bentinck Arm, camped and wrote in red paint, which has since been restored, "Alexander Mackenzie from Canada by land the 22nd July, 1793."

ANALYST ON STAND IN OLDS DEATH CHARGE

Gun Fired From More Than Six Feet, Expert Testifies

OLDS, Aug. 21. — A possibility that the shot which killed Fred Farrar, 58-year-old farmer who lived 15 miles east of here, came from a distance of more than six feet, was indicated by evidence presented yesterday during preliminary hearing of murder charges against Farrar's 30-year-old son Albert.

Statements read previously to the court showed Farrar had been killed by a bullet from a small gauge rifle which he had snatched up during a quarrel with his son.

NO BURN MARKS

"There were no traces of burned or unburned powder on the cloth around the bullet hole," assistant provincial analyst Noble said in telling of an examination of the dead man's shirt, "but it was contaminated with blood."

Powder burns or traces of unburned powder, Noble said, would be left from shots fired from a distance up to six feet.

Detective Thomas Symons of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police said that in the first of two statements he had obtained from Albert Farrar, the son said the gun had fallen to the floor after the shooting.

DIFFERENCE NOTED

A difference on this point was noted in another statement he had received from the widowed Mrs. Farrar, Symons explained, and a second statement from Farrar obtained.

"Farrar told me he 'let her go but didn't take any particular aim,' when he finally admitted he had taken the gun from his father," Symons said.

The hearing, which has been moved to the hockey arena from the court room, will be resumed Monday.

Case Of Cholera Quarantines Big Immigrant Ship

SINGAPORE, Straits Settlements, Aug. 21—A boatload of 1,500 Chinese immigrants was quarantined today after discovery of a case of cholera among them.

Dr. C. L. Park, director of the League of Eastern Health Bureau, said he would leave for Hong Kong to assist in the fight to control the cholera epidemic raging in and around that British colony.

The Hong Kong plague constituted fresh peril to thousands of Asiatic, British and other refugees from the war areas of North China. The epidemic already has taken 200 lives along the southern China coast.

Major and Minor Notes

By John Oliver

W. J. Hendra, conductor of the Edmonton Male Chorus and the Elgar Ladies' Chorus, has returned from his holidays on a favored island between Vancouver and Victoria and is refreshed and enthusiastic, awaiting the new season. While on the Pacific he did his best to forget music. He side-tracked both vocal and instrumental music and instead went sailing along the coast, delving into inlets and enjoying the relaxation.

* * *

But now, back here and on the threshold of a new season, he is anxious to get back into his manifold activities. Church choir work will be starting soon, as will rehearsals for both the Male Chorus and the Elgar organization. Plans for the season for these organizations have not been disclosed, but no doubt will contain much of interest.

* * *

In true artistic fashion, Henry Atack is looking forward to taking up his new duties as organist and choirmaster of First Presbyterian church. He will take over on the first of next month. Mr. Atack states that he will be glad to move closer to the centre of the city for one reason quite apart from the work in connection with the various services in the church. It will enable him to present his oratorios in a more spacious auditorium in a more central location with a consequent increase in the potential attendance thereat.

* * *

Mr. Atack already has scored heavily with his presentations of "Samson" and "Judas Maccabaeus." His effort in this field during the coming season will be watched with interest.

* * *

Musical circles here have been enriched by the addition of Richard Seaborn, violinist, of Calgary. Mr. Seaborn, well known in his former home town, is rapidly becoming equally well known here.

* * *

Possessed of an abundance of technique, he is a violinist of whom considerable will be heard.

* * *

Mrs. A. E. Rocque, who is vacationing in California, is expected home next week. Other musicians out of the city on holidays are expected to turn their steps toward home in the near future. Among these are Mrs. J. B. Carmichael, Alexander Nicol, Charles Pook and others.

Winsome

Among the leaders in the recent contest for the title of "America's most beautiful mother" was Mrs. Alice Hutchinson, above, of Mattapan, Mass., mother of a three-months-old son. Impressed by her pulchritude, a major film studio is giving Mrs. Hutchinson a screen test.

DAKOTAS GET RELIEF: EAST IS SWELTERING

Iowa Corn Crop Gets Six Inches Rain in Four-Day Downpour

CHICAGO, Aug. 21.—A cool wave spread eastward from the Dakotas this morning, while other parts of the United States sweltered, dodged heavy thundershowers or enjoyed mild summer weather.

The cool spell that pushed the mercury down into the 50's today in the Dakotas moved east in the wake of rains that brought some relief to perspiring Middle Western city dwellers and dollars in crop moisture to farmers.

In the east, however, temperatures remained high despite heavy thundershowers in some sections. Mugginess added to discomfort.

While local showers, high humidity and temperatures above normal prevailed along most of the Atlantic seaboard, skies were clearing and temperatures moderate except in desert areas in the section from the Rocky Mountains westward.

In the Middle West comfortable temperatures were recorded at points where rains continued. The mercury rose into the 80's where skies were sunny.

Forecasters said the rainfall in Iowa totalling six inches after four days of steady downpour, was of great benefit to corn crops. Some crop damage was reported from western and northwestern Missouri, where rain was heavy.

Dance Till Morning, Then Home To Die

MURRAYVILLE, B.C., Aug. 21.—Hazel Nickerson, 16-year-old Fort Langley girl who danced until midnight and then went home to die, was killed by phosphorous poison, stated a coroner's jury verdict delivered here Thursday. She died Aug. 3 and the day before the dance purchased a tube of rat poison. Phosphorous is used in rat poison.

Canadians Benefit In $30,000 Estate

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—Two Canadians, Annie Moore of Montreal and John A. MacDonald of Vancouver, share in the estate left by their sister, Effiem M. Rogers of New York, who died June 13.

The estate was valued at between $30,000 and $40,000. Four-fifths of the residue go to the two Canadians and Marion Clark of Seattle, Wash., and Agnes Brown of Scotland.

New Rail Route Will Be Opened To Gain Safety

Mervin "Red" Dutton, the Mentor Of New York Americans Hockey Squad, Directing Work.

DOWNIE, B.C., Aug. 21.—As an aim to greater safety two and a half miles of railway line near this station high in the Selkirk range of the Rocky Mountains is going to be abondoned this fall.

Before the snow begins to fly trains will be travelling over a new route which is now nearing completion. The new route is expected to cost the Canadian Pacific Railway more than $250,000—but they think it will be well worth it.

For over that 2½-mile stretch at least 22 lives have been lost in recent years and thousands of dollars have been spent in clearing away rock and snow slides and in repairing trackage damaged by them.

EAST OF REVELSTOKE

The new track commences half a mile from Alberta Canyon Gorge about 25 miles east of Revelstoke, at the gorge trains regularly stop to give passengers a chance to view the magnificent scenery and the 200-foot decline to the course of the small mountain stream.

It was on the doomed stretch that 17 men were killed a year and a half ago while they were clearing a snow cut. The tender of a railway engine broke away, hurtled into the cut and smashed them like flies against the towering banks of snow. Single and double accidents have added the others to the toll.

But now, the rumble of trucks—the first heard in these mountain fastnesses—is paving the way for the new route, moving material for a huge "fill" at the west end. It is a far cry from the equipment used when the original route was built.

HOCKEY PLAYER LEADS

Spurring the workmen to their tasks is Mervin "Red" Dutton, the famous hockey player who now manages New York Americans of the National Hockey League. Dutton is one of the partners in the Winnipeg contracting firm (Dutton & Co.) which has charge of the work.

"Red," whose hockey club last year became the N.H.L.'s "problem child," has found plenty of difficulties to overcome—but he has proved a match for them. He has had to pitch his tenacity against the determination of the roaring Illecillewaet River, battle with the crumbling shale and tussle with the smaller mountain freshets that nibbled at his big fill.

The huge expenditure is the second taken by the railway in a diversion to eliminate slide conditions. The first was the construction of the lengthy Connaugh tunnel, a step that allowed the railway to skip the hazrdous Rogers Pass route. On that stretch 67 men lost their lives on March 4, 1910.

OUTLOOK GOOD FOR CROPS IN AREA OF OLDS

OLDS, Aug. 21.—Crop conditions are splendid here and about 50 per cent of the wheat will be harvested. There has been little damage. The recent heavy rains carried some hail in outlying districts but the damage is small as compared with the entire Olds district.

The end of the coming week should see the bulk of all grain safely harvested. The weather is seemingly well settled, yesterday was warm and still with a cloudless sky.

Last Sunday and Monday mornings were close to the frost line but no damage is reported, even to tender garden plants. Wheat in this district should run from 22 to 30 bushels per acre. Pastures have come on wonderfully since the heavy rains in July.

Lawyer Works 2 Years On Farm That Wasn't His

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21—Ernest N. Hudgins, young Washington and Virginia attorney, has learned he put in two years of his spare time fixing up a farm he did not own.

He bought a place at nearby Chantilly, Va., in 1935. The trouble was that Hudgins bought the farm from a bank sight unseen, and failed to get specific instructions on how to get there.

He and Mrs. Hudgins liked the place they found. He cleared the ground and mended the roadway. Then, the other day, the real owner showed up. The Hudgins moved on down the road to their own place.

SINKING FARMS ARE TURNED TO TOURIST DRAW

BUHL, Idaho, Aug. 21.—It seems there are hundreds of people who are willing—even eager—to pay 50 cents to watch a farm drop.

So the residents of Idaho's "sinking canyon," dismayed two weeks ago when crop-laden acres crumbled and fell 250 feet, bustled about today to harvest tourist dollars from the hundreds of curious who flocked to the scene from 33 states.

Mrs. Harry McArlin, who operates a ranch near the land disturbance, invited hordes of tourists to cross her fields and view the new canyon from a distance—at 50 cents a car. Many of Buhl's 2,000 residents hired themselves out as guides.

Two amateur photographers snapped views of the sinking canyon. They quickly sold 1,000 "souvenir post cards."

Woman Strangled To Death, Asserts Autopsy Surgeon

ELK LAKE, Ont., Aug. 21.—Death "at the hands of some person unknown," was the verdict returned last night by the coroner's jury inquiring into the death of Mrs. Frank Dolan of Elk Lake, whose body was found by searchers working under the direction of provincial police in the cellar of her home. Elk Lake is 40 miles northeast of Cobalt.

Dr. E. R. Frankish, medico-legal expert who performed an autopsy, testified the woman had been strangled. There were also fractures on both sides of the skull above the ear, apparently made by a round instrument. Either of the injuries would have caused death, he said.

MANILA DARK FOR REFUGEES BY EARTHQUAKE

Worst Temblors In 40 Years Shake Capital Of Islands

MANILA, Aug. 21.—Twin earthquakes—Manila's worst in 40 years—converted this haven of safety into a darkened city of terror last night for refugees from embattled Shanghai.

City lights, snuffed out by the first shock, were restored to reveal streets strewn with broken masonry and glass. Hospitals treated many injured but no deaths were reported.

The first and most devastating quake came at 7:59 p.m. (6:59 a.m. M.S.T.). Broken windows cascaded down the fronts of buildings and into the streets.

RESIDENTS FLEE

Residents fled in terror from their homes. Fires broke out in many places, but few proved serious.

"Is this another war?" cried one girl from among a screaming group of women refugees who five days previously ran a gauntlet of bullets to escape Shanghai.

The first wave of terror was just beginning to subside when the second quake shook the city, at 8:24 p.m.

Seismologists said the force of the first tremor was of an intensity of between No. 5 and No. 6 on the recognized scale which measures lightest shocks as No. 1 and the heaviest on record as No. 10. The second shock was classified as of No. 4 intensity.

The foundation of the Great Eastern hotel sank four inches. Guests fled to the streets, some in night clothing.

AUDIENCES RUN

Scattered plate glass and other debris was strewn for blocks along the Escolta, Manila's main street.

Movie audiences stampeded into the streets and some injuries were incurred in those rushes. Water gushed from broken mains. Many churches and other large buildings on the outskirts apparently were damaged to a considerable extent.

The shocks centred only 3½ miles from the downtown area and were felt as far away as Baguio, Philippine summer capital 175 miles to the north.

This Fish Story Must Be True: Owner Says So

SARANAC LAKE, N.J., Aug. 21—"So help me—it's true," declares Harold Thomas who says he has "educated" a black bass to respond to a dinner bell and—of all things—allows itself to be weighed once a week.

The bass — Thomas calls it "Charlie"—made its appearance in Thomas' boat slip last spring. It weighs a ound and three ounces and measures 15 inches.

Hatters, No Longer Mad, End Strike

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Aug. 21.—The nine weeks old strike of 225 employees of the John B. Stetson Company (Canada) Limited ended yesterday when an agreement was signed.

Recognition of the United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers' Internation union, which caused the strike June 26, is not provided in the agreement which will remain in effect until September, 1938.

15th Earl Of Perth Succumbs At 66

ROUEN, France, Aug. 21.—William Huntly Drummond, 15th Earl of Perth, died today of an intestinal ailment. He was 66 years old.

The Earl's half-brother, Sir Eric Drummond, British ambassador to Rome, succeeds to the earldom.

CITY CHURCH ACTIVITIES

UNITY OF CHURCH WINS ACCLIAM

The National Preaching Mission in the United States began at the very heart of the country, namely, the old state of Pennsylvania. It is interdenominational, 25 sister churches having just met at Pittsburgh in the western part, and there will be a rally later of the eastern section in Philadelphia, the city of "brotherly love." The unity of the church throughout the world is expressed in the remarkable choice of ministers who have taken the pulpits to "strengthen the foundations of Christian faith in America and call for a spiritual awakening in this time of pending crisis." At the Pittsburgh meeting Dr. E. Stanley Jones, who refused the offer of a bishopric in the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States and went back to his work in India, was one of the preachers. Dr. George W. Truett of Dallas, Texas, president of the Baptist World's Alliance; Dr. T. S. Koo, an Anglican, a graduate in philosophy and theology of Balloil College, Oxford, now general secretary of the Y.M.C.A. in China; Principal John S. Whale, of Cheshunt Congregational College, Cambridge, a brilliant young leader, who said, "The Church may never be strong again until a few of us are burned," are some of those engaged in the mission.

RALLY PLANNED AT BONNIE DOON

All departments of the Bonnie Doon Baptist Church will meet in a special rally on Sunday at 2:30 p.m. to welcome the Rev. and Mrs. Archie Gordon of India. Both Rev. and Mrs. Gordan are widely known Baptist missionaries. They will both take part in the service, and an invitation is given to the general public to come and hear these outstanding Baptist missionaries.

GENERAL SYNOD MEETS IN EAST

Meeting in Halifax, N.S., the 14th session of the general synod of the Church of England in Canada will convene August 29 and will continue for two weeks or longer, depending on the business brought before the members. Lay and clerical delegates from every diocese in Canada will attend the sessions of the synod to consider the reports of the executive council, the general boards and special committees of the church.

Opening with a communion service Sunday morning, August 29, in All Saints' cathedral, the business meetings will start Monday, August 30. A list of important notices of motion is included in the agenda of the synod and will come up for discussion prior to the presentation of reports.

On Thursday evening, September 2, a mass service of witness will be held at which an attendance of 10,000 people is expected. The speakers on this occasion will be the Rt. Rev. A. W. Blunt, lord bishop of Bradford, England, and Rt. Rev. C. C. B. Bardsley, lord bishop of Leicester, England. At the opening service of communion on August 29, the guest preacher will be Rt. Rev. J. G. Fitz-Maurice Day, bishop of Ossony, Ferns and Leighlin, Kilkenny, Irish Free State.

Halifax was chosen as the meeting place of the synod this year in order that it might serve also as a fitting celebration of the 150th anniversary of the arrival of Bishop Charles Inglish at Halifax in 1787, to be the first bishop of the Church of England in Canada.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

At all Christian Science churches next Sunday, the subject of the lesson-sermon will be "Mind." The following is one of the Scriptural quotations contained in the lesson-sermon: "For who hath known the mind of the Lord? or who hath been his counsellor?" (Romans 11:34). One of the correlative passages from "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, is as follows (page 275): "Divine metaphysics, as revealed to spiritual understanding, shows clearly that all is Mind, and that Mind is God, omnipotence, omnipresence, omniscience—that is, all power, all presence, all Science. Hence all is in reality the manifestation of Mind."

FAMOUS CLERIC WILL VISIT HERE

Anglicans in Edmonton will be looking forward with great interest to the forthcoming visit of the Right Reverend A. W. F. Blunt, bishop of Bradford, England. He will arrive in the city on the afternoon of Friday, September 24, and on the same evening will address a meeting to be held in All Saints' Parish Hall, his subject to be "The Eternal Church in the World Today."

Dr. Blunt is one of the three English bishops who will attend the general synod of the Canadian church which meets in Halifax at the end of this month. After the synod he is making a trans-Canada tour, in the course of which this visit to Edmonton takes place.

It's a thousand miles from the nearest hospital, 350 miles from the nearest wireless station and an equal distance off regular air routes, 650 miles from a doctor—and there is no sun for three months of every year.

Looking Them Over

Tough On Welsh

Consider Future

Efficient Basis

NEXT Thursday evening, [illegible] Farr will climb into the ring at Yankee Stadium [illegible] the world's heavyweight championship. Hundreds of U.S. sport writers who are specialists on boxing [illegible] defence during their training work and not a single one has even seriously suggested that Farr has a chance of winning.

The press gang is unanimous in forecasting a Louis victory and the only point they differ on is the number of rounds the fearless Welshman will be able to [illegible] get past the first [illegible] Farr may last five or six rounds. [illegible] were practically unanimous in predicting that Schmeling didn't have a chance with this same Joe Louis. What is more they had seen both Schmeling and Louis in action before making this forecast, but now they are predicting a cinch win for Louis without having seen Farr in an actual fight.

This data is merely supplied so you will know approximately what the count is in case anyone backs you into a corner and tries to make a bet on the outcome of Thursday's beak-busting bee. It's tough to be a Welshman these days—just as it was tough to be Irish before the Braddock-Louis fight.

However, [illegible] a chance to win. Louis isn't the best boxer that has worn the heavyweight crown and he [illegible] English boxing experts [illegible] a long year. These experts may have been misled into thinking that Baer, Neusel and Loughran were top notchers at present in the U.S. fight business, but just the same this lad Farr must have something. Any [illegible] on the button will change a champion into a has-been.

Take a Good Long Look

THROUGHOUT [illegible]

It would not be hard to name at least a score of towns that have spent upwards of $30,000 on sport grounds and buildings and still need more. That much money should give a town a covered rink, gymnasium, public auditorium, swimming pool, curling rink, tennis courts, ball diamond, football field, showers and locker rooms.

The secret of getting these all out of $30,000 is planning them all as a single plant. The building that provides the rink can be made to provide gymnasium, auditorium, curling rink, swimming pool, locker rooms and showers at very little additional cost. The tennis courts, baseball [illegible] gymnasium can easily be made large enough for two badminton courts. There is nothing more imperative in any sport than showers and comfortable dressing rooms. One central heating plant and plumbing system [illegible]

Courage and Vision Needed

YOU will get a gorgeous horse laugh if you tell any town that it should [illegible] $30,000 sport plant; in fact, you will be lucky if some of [illegible] of what that will do to their mill rate. However, any number of towns have spent from $15,000 upward on covered rinks and what has been [illegible]

The alarming thing is not the total cost, it is the staggering total that has been practically wasted in haphazard dabs here and there. Ball diamonds and tennis courts are constantly being moved, good money is being wasted on open rinks, every now and then several hundred dollars are spent in a vain effort to make a gym in some building or other that is never satisfactory and this sort of thing goes on decade after decade.

What is needed is a good thorough survey of the situation before money is spent. Determine what the complete requirements are, design a [illegible]

BUDGE, RIGGS ENTER FINALS CASINO PLAY

NEWPORT, R.I., Aug. 21.—The United States top notch tennis amateur, Don Budge, and its most promising youngster, Bobby Riggs, brilliant California 19-year-old, on Friday gained the final round of the Casino tournament.

To become a finalist for the second time in three seasons, Budge overcame his Davis cup teammate, Bryan (Bitsy) Grant of Atlanta, 8-6, 6-0, 6-0, and Riggs kept pace with him by outlasting Frank Parker of Milwaukee, another U.S. internationalist, 6-8, 6-4, 6-3, 4-6, 6-3 after a gruelling 3½-hour battle under a blazing sun.

Budge and Gene Mako, the national doubles champions and Davis cup pair, gained the final round for the second consecutive year by defeating John McDairmid of Princeton, N.J., and Pat Hendrix, Lakeland, Fla., 6-4, 6-4, 6-3. They will oppose the British Davis cuppers, G. Patrick Hughes and Charles E. Hare, in today's team final.

The Englishmen qualified for the final match by trouncing Aldred Jarvis, Tenafly, N.J., and Gerner Mulloy of Miami, 6-4, 6-0, 6-4.

Renewed Interest Centred On Eaton Challenge Match

With the big Alberta open golf tourney rapidly nearing, exceptional interest will centre on the Eaton challenge trophy game billed for Sunday afternoon at the Country Club.

Jam Mountifield and Doug Kilbourn, Country Club pro and champion respectively, will be staging their first defence of this coveted trophy, which they finally wrested from the Martell brothers. The challengers will be Bert Gee and Tommy Vickers of the Municipal.

Mountifield and Gee are two of the pros who will be seeking a chunk of the $500 prize money being offered in the provincial open which gets underway at the Edmonton Country Club on September 5.

Canada Packers Win Initial Semi-Final Game by 15-4 Score

Club Orange Crush Crew Into Defeat; Second Game On Monday

Canada Packers took a strangle hold on the senior girls' semi-final baseball series as they won the first of a best-of-three playoff [illegible] Orange Crush by a large score of 15-4 last night at Boyle Street. The winner of this [illegible] the finals.

Playing near errorless ball all the way, the Packers proved too good for the Crush crew. They piled up a large lead early in the game and finished strongly with two four-run rallies in the last two frames. While gleaning their large margin the Packers held their opponents to one run until the last frame in which inning the Crush outfit was lucky enough to tally three times, mainly as a result of two Packer errors.

TOSS 'EM ALL OVER

[illegible] committed no less than eight errors, many of which were costly and afforded the Packers runs.

On an earned run basis the Packers won by a 5-1 margin, as 10 of their runs were unearned.

Phyllis Walters, ace of the Packer pitching staff, turned in a neat hurling performance. Phyllis allowed but six hits and kept them well scattered, except in the last frame when the Crushites rapped out three hits.

Walters shaded Nellie Rosso, the latter the best hurler for the Crushites, by a wide margin. Rosso was touched for 10 hits, the longest of which was Rene Fraser's two-ply blast in the sixth frame.

Stars for the Packers last night were Nellie Wynnyk, in left field, who made several fine catches. [illegible] Peanuts and Jerry Martin at third and shortstop, while Helena Hudyma was always steady at second base.

Kay King, who is without a doubt the finest catcher in the league, turned in her best [illegible] job of the season last night. Base runners had a hard time "stealing" the satchels off of her and she allowed but three stolen bases compared to 18 stolen against Vi Waring of the Crush crew.

Packers packed most of their batting power in three big hitters. They were Nellie Wynnyk, Rene Fraser and Helena Hudyma, who had two hits each. Wynnyk and Fraser batted only three times, while Hudyma had four chances. Peanuts Martin, Vic Wynnyk, Val Lamb and Phyl Walters each had one single.

[illegible] Nixon, starting late in the game, had a perfect day at bat. She clouted two for two while Jackie Wynnyk, May Algeo, Marg. Atkey and Vi Pateman hit one single each.

Ruth Lett Stops Winning Ways Of Westerners In South Side Gala

Swimmers from the West End club copped two of the three provincial championships that were at stake last night at the sixth annual gala of the South Side Swimming club.

The first upset for the South Siders came when Miss L. MacCauley of the West End club won the ladies' provincial diving championship with a beautiful exhibition. Bessie Smith, another West Ender, placed second, while Phyllis Harris, defending champ, was third.

BEATS FAST FIELD

Bob Matheson scored the next major victory for the West End when he out-pointed Norman Allish and Harold Sutton to win the men's provincial 100 yards championship. His time was one minute and four seconds. Allish placed second. Sutton third.

It remained for Ruth Lett, speedy South Side ace, to stop the sweep of West Enders. She did this by taking the ladies' provincial 440 yards title event with a fine display of class. This event was an all South Side finish with R. Ramshaw second and Nora Adair third.

FARR'S INJURY PROVES SLIGHT

LONG BRANCH, N.J., Aug. 21.—An examination Friday of the cut under the right eye suffered by Tommy Farr in training Thursday satisfied Bill Brown, member of the New York State athletic commission, and Dr. William Walker, commission physician, that the injury was slight.

"We had been advised that the injury was not serious but we wanted to see for ourselves," explained Brown. An examination by Dr. Walker revealed it wasn't serious and that the British champion probably will be able to resume boxing today in preparing for his August 26 title bout with champion Joe Louis.

Farr confined his training Friday to six rounds of shadow boxing, bag punching, rope skipping and calisthenics.

Vancouver Colts Score 162; Tourists Tally 195 For 7 Wickets

By H. H. GORDON

VANCOUVER, Aug. 21. — The touring Marylebone Cricket Club team ran its string of victories in Canada to 10 Friday, defeating Vancouver Colts by eight wickets at Brockton park. Fifteen Vancouver youngsters faced the Englishmen and compiled 162 runs, the visitors passing the total with only two wickets down, finishing with a score of 195 for seven wickets.

Another slashing innings by K. A. Sellar, the former international rugby star, featured the contest. Going in at the fall of the wicket, he drove and pulled with terrific power and in 35 minutes hit up 70 runs. His score included two sixes and 10 fours. Against a British Columbia mainland team on Tuesday he made 92 not out.

Topping the score of 35 made against [illegible] yesterday, G. C. Newman, English skipper, hit vigorously for 44, sending the ball to the boundary seven times.

Nerves affected the Colts at the start of the game and wickets fell like ninepins until W. Kellock and Ian Russell stayed together to add 66 for the ninth wicket. The pair scored freely after eight earlier batsmen had mustered only 43 runs. Kellock turned in top score for his side with 32, Russell hit up 30.

They were followed by R. Hardisty and O. Karn. The former had made 18 when he sent a catch to J. Brocklebank in the long-field and Karn, a Vernon junior, [illegible] his bat for 18.

IN RARE FORM

A. P. Singleton, M.C.C. spin bowler, was in rare form, taking six wickets for 58 runs. The Oxford University captain mixed his offering skilfully. J. T. Neve, H. J. Enthoven and Newman each dismissed two men.

Basil Robinson was the only successful Canadian bowler. With his field set deep, Robinson sent down slow spinners, getting four wickets for 56 runs. He clean bowled Wykes but smart catches netted him the other three wickets.

Today the visiting team plays its last match before leaving for Montreal. The opposition will be provided by a representative British Columbia eleven.

JUVENILES PLAY AT BOYLE STREET

O.C. Cricket

LONDON, Aug. 21.—Another overturn came Friday in the closest duel for first-class county cricket championship honors seen here in many seasons, when Yorkshire again displaced Middlesex from the head of the standing.

Winning their match with Glamorgan, Yorkshire went into the lead with an average of 71.20 points compared to 70.79 for Middlesex, who won their match with Somerset Thursday.

Yorkshire pulled out a win over Glamorgan by 85 runs, thanks to the powerful arm of Hedley Verity, test cricket bowler, who took 10 wickets in two innings today for 147 runs and gathered 18 points for a victory when it seemed the best the Yorkshiremen could do would be to win first innings.

Buck Eaton Hurls Winning Baseball To Take 6-2 Edge

Superior Hitting Power By All-Stars Proves Payoff For Locals—Harney And Fenton Get Triples

JERRY Goodwin's touring Zulu Cannibals will leave Edmonton with a healthy respect for its baseball players.

Last night at Renfrew Park, Leroy Goldsworthy's All-Stars made it three straight over the Zulus with a well-earned 6-2 victory.

Emerson "Buck" Eaton was on the mound for the All-Stars and though he allowed nine hits, he sprinkled them sparsely along the route, while he was chopping down the man-eaters when the pressure was on with a string of 11 strike-outs.

TAKE 3-1 EDGE

Wednesday the All-Stars defeated the Zulus 10-2, while they had also won the last game of their previous two-game series 6-3. The Zulus took the inital clash 11-8.

Last night the pay-off was on the superior hitting power of the winning team. The All-Stars went out and scattered their hits in the three first innings to score five of their six runs. They added a singleton in the fourth.

Jesse, Zulu short-stop, clouted the only home run of the game in the sixth inning when he sent one sailing over the right field fence. [illegible] Horne and [illegible] Fenton each smacked out three-baggers for the All-Stars.

STARKY MINERS CAN CLINCH TIE FOR PLAY-OFFS

The South Side Starky Miners will be out to clinch at least a tie for a play-off berth in the Edmonton Senior League Sunday afternoon at Renfrew park.

The Miners clash with the Army and Navy Cardinals in a scheduled fixture. The game will start at 3 p.m.

If the Miners win this game they will be assured of at least tieing the North Edmonton Belmonts in the second half race for first place and a playoff berth. Should they lose to the Cardinals, the Miners will be within striking distance of the Belmonts. All of which goes to make the home stretch of the league a keen and interesting affair. [illegible]

CALGARY, Aug. 21—Richland three, newest Turner Valley crude producer, will be placed on production test today. The well is officially reported yielding better than 500 barrels daily of 50 degrees baume crude oil. The gas flow, estimated at five million cubic feet, is sufficient to throw the oil high into the derrick.

HOPE FINDS A FAMILY - - - - by Elizabeth Jordan

A Bulletin Short Story Complete On This Page Every Saturday

HOPE MAYO leaned back in her big chair, [illegible]ked around the comfortable cabin of the airplane, and mentally counted her fellow passengers.

Counting the child, there were eight in all—five men and one woman besides herself, as well as the stew[illegible]. Four of the men were middle-aged and prosperous looking—probably successful business executives. It was [illegible] that they were used to airplanes [illegible] clear that they did not know one another.

The fifth was quite a different type. He was young, certainly not more than twenty-five, and he was so [illegible] a novice in planes and so happy over his new experience that Hope's heart warmed to him. Hope herself was only twenty-three, but that young man made her feel maternal.

He smiled irrespressibly and Hope returned the [illegible] warmly. He was clearly one of those tempera[illegible] young for his years, and with a high [illegible]. He was not a moving picture hero, but he had a [illegible] clean-cut face, an irresistible smile and brown eyes one remembered.

She turned her eyes to the woman passenger across [illegible] from the [illegible] a child that had evidently abandoned [illegible] The [illegible] seemed about three.

Hope returned her smile enthusiastically, and the [illegible] and she glanced anxiously at her mother. The [illegible] was in deep mourning and her expression was [illegible]. Her bereavement must have been very recent, Hope reflected. Her face, which would be rather charm[illegible] to her new [illegible]

[illegible] and agreeable, [illegible] forward.

[illegible] she suggested. "I [illegible] a change for you both."

[illegible] want her to be a nuisance."

[illegible] Hope said cheerfully. [illegible]

Pilots Are Fine Type

[illegible]

Flung Clear Of Machine

[illegible] away. They grew louder. They were the shrieks of a frantic child [illegible]

"All dead," [illegible] you and I and the youngster were flung clear [illegible] machine. That's what saved [illegible]

Hope tottered back to the scattered wreckage. [illegible]

"By God"—the young voice choked—"we're looking at [illegible] we? One look is enough."

Her knees gave way. He caught and steadied her. [illegible]

"Please look more carefully—awful as it is. I'll go [illegible]

[illegible] gulp.

Hope repeated, "I must go to the baby." The one thing she knew she could not endure, in this hell she was in, was another look at those bodies. "Will that flashlight last?"

"Yes. It's self-charging—the kind you wind up as you use it. Keep steady. The worst is over. I put the baby under that tree over there—see?—and ordered her not to budge. I don't think she has a scratch. I'll be with you in a few minutes."

"What time is it?" she brought out as she turned away.

"I don't know. My watch was smashed, of course. But it must be between 2 and 3 o'clock. It's all guess work, but I was awake all night. I think the crash came about 2. You and I have been unconscious—perhaps five or ten minutes, perhaps an hour."

The baby's voice had galvanized Hope again and she caught his last words as she ran. Wanda's cries were [illegible]. She must have moved, must be wandering away. Hope tripped over a tree stump, fell, got up, and ran on, calling to the child. She fell again and ran again, following the sound of the voice somewhere off in that darkness.

Woman And Child

At last a pathetically exhausted wail came from the darkness very close to her. For an instant the fog seemed to thin and part. In the clearing she saw what might be the little figure, and heard again that choked [illegible]. She reached the figure and clasped it wildly. Woman and child, both silent now after Wanda's ecstatic "Mamma!" shook in each other's arms.

Hope felt the child's clothing. The hem of the little bathrobe was wet under it the short-legged sleeping suit [illegible] hem of the robe, settled the child on her lap as com[illegible] keep her warm. Wanda spoke.

[illegible]

She knew then, though she could not see that this was [illegible]

"We'll go soon, darling. But I must call out first, so Mr. Carey will come and get us."

"I want mummy!"

[illegible] Wanda. But you and I [illegible]

"Y—e—s," Wanda admitted slowly.

[illegible]

could have become of young Mr. Carey? Surely he [illegible]

Could Not Cry Out

[illegible] of a small boy broke from him and he dropped [illegible] beside her.

[illegible]

After another moment he got up and wrapped one of the rugs around her, covering her and Wanda to their [illegible]

[illegible]

Now he filled the cap with whiskey and handed it [illegible] gasped down the remainder.

"I've been looking for you for almost two hours," he explained, when he had settled down again and [illegible] other [illegible] but with the fog I don't know which [illegible] we can see where we are going and I probably doubled on my tracks. You look all in."

"Wanda and I have been resting. We can go on if you think it's best. Have you any idea at all where we landed?"

"Not much. Somewhere in the State of Wyoming, I suppose. Not frightened, are you?"

"No, not since I've found Wanda. But I do feel as if I couldn't breathe naturally till I get her out of this and back to shelter somewhere."

Hope laid her cheek on the top of Wanda's bronze curls, and their guardian got up and moved away to look for fuel. On a sudden thought he stopped and came back.

"My name is Carey," he announced. "I live in Chicago."

"So do I. My name is Hope Mayo."

He hesitated.

"You've done a lot of flying, haven't you?" he asked. "Somehow, you look as if you had."

"Yes. I've flown a lot here and in Europe."

"Will this tragedy put you off it? Make you feel as if you didn't want to fly any more?"

"I don't think so," she told him. "There are bound to be accidents. Think of the numbers that have died in automobile accidents—and on ships and railroad trains."

"And even in the old-time buggy behind the old-time horse," he smiled. It was the second time she had seen him smile, and the smile faded as quickly as it had come. "That's the way I feel about it," he said. "I hope it won't seem heartless, but I hate to think I'd never fly again. Now I'll get the wood. There seems to be plenty around. I'll keep within hearing. Take a good sleep if you can," he called back as he went.

Grown-Ups Are Funny

Wanda wrenched herself out of Hope's arms and sat up. Hope awoke, too, with a start. For an instant she stared about dazedly—at the child, at the thick [illegible] early sun, piercing the branches of the tall pine and spruce sentinels around [illegible] of her body ached, but her heart rose singing. The blessed, twice blessed sunshine!

"Good morning, Wanda," she said, cheerfully. "Didn't we have a nice sleep?"

Wanda looked at her doubtfully and pointed to the [illegible]. "Who is dat?"

"That's Mr. Carey—the nice young man we were waiting for last night. While you were asleep he came and found us."

"Was we lost?"

[illegible]

The young man's smile faded.

[illegible]

He produced the box as he spoke and held it out to her. Wanda extended a grimy little paw and took two.

"What's your name?"

[illegible] one."

[illegible] observed expansively. "She cwies all the time. She cwies 'cause Daddy's gone to heaven. I'm going to heaven some day to see Daddy."

[illegible]

donna, and take you to the hotel!"

"I think we'll both have to stick around Slater a [illegible] There will be things to do for the others. Telegrams and telephones, you know. They have families, too. I'll put in my time on that."

"I know," she said contritely. "So will I—if I can [illegible] with you." She added "I have if you need more. Fortunately I carried mine around my neck."

"Thanks. I have all I need for the time being," John Allen assured her. "But I'll be glad if you'll stand by till some one comes along to take over."

"Of course I will."

"Good. So long, Mad[illegible]."

"So long, John Allen."

Wanda broke in.

"Will you pwease bwing my mummy back, Uncle Jack? I want her."

The new uncle and aunt exchanged a look.

"I'll do my best, Wanda," John Allen said with a sigh. "And I'll bring you a new doll if there's a toy shop in Slater. I'll bring back your mother's travelling bag, too, if I can find it," he told Hope. "There'll be clothes for Wanda in that. Now get those baths and tuck in a big breakfast."

Communication Depressing

He and Hope had their first real talk late that afternoon at the Slater Inn. John Allen had found a brief interval for a shave and a meal. Wanda played contentedly at their feet. With the faith of childhood she had accepted them as her family and their relation as permanent.

John Allen had discovered that Wanda's last name was Estabridge. The Air Transportation Company had put Hope in touch with hte home of the child's maternal grandmother in San Francisco. The results of the connection were depressing, as summed up by the grandmother's trained nurse.

It appeared that the grandmother was on her death bed, and that Mrs. Estabridge, widowed only six weeks ago, had been on her way to that death-bed when she was killed. The grandmother, the nurse thought, had not more than two or three days to live. So far as the nurse knew there were no other relatives, but she had given Hope's telephone number to the Estabridge's lawyer in Chicago. He had promptly [illegible] long distance communication with Hope, but he confirmed the [illegible]

So far as he knew there were no other relatives. Mr. Estabridge's death in an accident had left his widow with a very small income, he went on to explain. Wanda would have that now, of course, and would undoubtedly inherit the little her grandmother had, aside from the annuity that died with the old lady. Wanda would have enough to pay her way and educate her, and her small [illegible] had been provided for in her mother's will, made soon after the father's death.

But the unexpected responsibility evidently appalled the lawyer. He explained that he was a bachelor [illegible]

[illegible] Wanda as soon as we can leave here. [illegible]

[illegible]

"I'd like nothing better," she admitted. The young man flashed his likeable [illegible]

"You might marry Wendell," he suggested. "I'm afraid that's the only way. They'll never turn over this infant to [illegible]"

"I'm almost capable of doing it," Hope admitted, "but not quite. And he'd run like [illegible]" she added depressedly. "A good man, with a tucked-in nature and a horror of personal res[illegible]"

John Allen looked at her [illegible]

"Do you usually size up people as quickly as that?"

Hope sighed.

"No," she admitted. "My insight is stimulated by my interest in this baby. But that interest doesn't come from a 'Bambino complex,' as you may imagine. It's because I'm so alone myself. I've always been alone since my father and mother were killed in a motor accident when I was six. I can't endure thinking of Wanda in the care of a machine-made guardian.

"My own guardian was married and both he and his family were kind to me in their aloof way. I put in my vacations with them when I wasn't with schoolmates. But they had no children and they didn't know anything about children. I was always an outsider. I never 'belonged.' I never had a real home. I'm not going to let Wanda go through that," she added [illegible]

John Allen leaned forward.

"Then why not marry me?" he suggested very quietly. "Not now, of course, and please don't interrupt. So far as I'm concerned my mind is made up. I've watched you go through this tragedy and it's enough for me. I've become as obsessed by you as you are by Wanda. But I know you haven't given me a thought, except as something that's useful to the child. That's all right. I'm sold on Wanda myself. [illegible]

"What I'm suggesting is that we take the summer to get [illegible] fall if we want to. We both live in Chicago. We'll have plenty of chances to know each other—though if you [illegible] ance. [illegible] the [illegible]

"I have good references, and my mother's a peach if I do say it. [illegible] too. You and Wanda will have a whole family ready made, and they're the best human beings I know. I'm starting in as a lawyer, and there's a job ready for me. That's why I was taking this last fling. We [illegible] start on. You may find someone else during the summer. So may I. But let's give ourselves and Wanda the chance. How about it?"

Wanda dropped her doll, stood up, and climbed [illegible]

Montreal Textile Plant Is Stoned: Police Pull Guns

MONTREAL, Aug. 21. — March of some 300 brick-tossers on the St. Henri plant of the Dominion Textile Company, only halted after a handful of constables doing sentinel duty pulled revolvers from their belts, is under investigation, police said today.

Every effort will be made, they asserted, to track down the leaders of the mob which broke up when bricks and stones flung at the front of a four-storey annex to the big plant had smashed most of the windows.

The attack came shortly before midnight. Watchmen in the mill, one of a chain of nine operated in a half-dozen Quebec province towns and cities by the company, called a warning to the constables on duty when from a second-storey window they saw the crowd marching down narrow St. Ambroise street leading to the gates.

St. Henri, which normally employs about 1,000 of the textile firm's 10,000 Quebec workers, all on strike since Aug. 2 for better wages and union recognition, was re-opened peacefully Thursday. The window-smashing siege was unexpected.

SINO-JAPANESE CONFLICT MAY LAST 3 YEARS

Leaders On Both Sides Make Statements On Warfare

By MORRIS J. HARRIS
Associated Press Foreign Staff

SHANGHAI, Aug. 21—General Chang Chi-Chung, commander-in-chief of the Chinese armies defending Shanghai, told this correspondent tonight that the Sino-Japanese conflict in the Shanghai area would end soon with a smashing victory for China.

He added that if a general nation-wide war should break out, time would be on the side of the Chinese who now were prepared to continue the struggle for years.

I interviewed him in the camouflaged offices of army general headquarters. The gate leading to his offices bore Chinese characters meaning "house of peace."

CAMOUFLAGED AUTO

As I drove up Chinese sentries quickly threw a protective camouflage around my automobile. The wisdom of their action was evident almost immediately.

I had hardly entered general headquarters when a squadron of Japanese bombers roared overhead, dropping bombs that were meant to wipe out the Chinese "GHQ." Though they landed very close, little damage was done.

APPEARS CONFIDENT

General Chang, veteran of the 1932 Shanghai war, appeared confident the Japanese forces would shortly be driven south of Soochow creek into the midst of the international settlement.

He asserted that in that event, he would expect the international authorities to disarm the Japanese.

If [illegible] were unable to, he said he would attempt to direct attack on the settlement without instructions from the central government at Nanking.

Premier Konoye Says War To Take Years

TOKYO, Aug. 21 — Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye [illegible] today the Sino-Japanese conflict would be of long duration and that there would be no settlement until Japan had "punished" the Chinese army.

He barred foreign intervention in the undeclared war, asserting peace negotiations must be conducted by China and Japan alone.

In his second interview since assuming office, Prince Konoye explained Japan had launched a tremendous drive against S[illegible] and northern China because it "had to."

Italy Enters Eight Machines, One Flown By Mussolini's Son

ISTRES, France, Aug. 21—Thirteen of Europe's fastest planes roared away from here last night in a race to Damascus and back for prizes totalling 3,000,000 francs (about $112,000).

Bruno Mussolini, aviator-son of the Italian premier, was co-pilot in one of the eight Italian entries in the 3,600-mile race. The Italians, with more planes in the race than all other nationalities combined, were favored to win most of the prize money.

CALGARY, Aug. 21. — George Washington Elliott, 73, one of Alberta's pioneer traders, died here yesterday. In 1883 Elliott came to Alberta from his native Perth, Ont., to open a trading post on the Battle river between Edmonton and Calgary.

ALWAYS ENCLOSE A STAMPED ADDRESSED ENVELOPE
Address all correspondence to: The Director, Stamp Collectors' Club, The Bulletin, Edmonton, Alberta.

For some years The Bulletin has made possible guidance in the hobby of an internationally known philatelic expert, who is at your service to advise regarding your problems.

YOU are welcome to membership. State your age, size of collection and what stamps are of special interest to you. Enclose postage for reply always. You will receive a membership card and some stamps for your collection.

The use of the hinges in the proper way is also important. It should be noted that any hinge is only [illegible] a stamp is mounted and then found to be in its wrong place on the page, it should be left for an hour or so, before any attempt is made to remove it to its proper [illegible] damp is almost sure to [illegible] the album page.

[illegible] is selected which is not quite as wide as the stamp to be mounted. Hold the hinge with the gummed side downward, and fold back about a third of it with your tweezers, pressing the crease down with the thumb nail. The stamp is then placed face downwards on the table with the top edge uppermost [illegible] portion of the hinge is slightly moistened with the tongue, and attached to the stamp within a fraction of an inch of the top edge and midway between the sides. The hinge must be clear of the top perforations or it will show when the stamp is mounted on the page. You now have your stamp with one-third (about) of the gummed side of your hinge attached to it, and with two-thirds lying free. Pull the free end away from the stamp, so that your tongue will not touch the [illegible] lower edge of the free end. Do not lick the free two-thirds all over, making a meal of the gum—about an eighth of an inch moistened is sufficient. The stamp can then be placed carefully in position on the page, by means of the hinge, and when it is in place it will be found [illegible] of the stamp being turned right back, for examination of the watermark, etc., without any damage being done to the perforations. This would be impossible if the hinge had not been placed right at the top of the stamp, or if the free part of the hinge had been licked all over.
